New Blaze On Noronic Is Put Out By Firemen

Only 34 Identified Of 118 Known Dead; Four-Way Probe To Continue Today

Toronto, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Firemen today quickly extinguished a new fire on the steamer Noronic, which burned yesterday with 118 dead and 154 missing.

New flames burst out on the stern of the ship more than 36 hours after a flash fire had turned the gay pleasure boat into a blazing scene of panic and death.

Shortly afterwards diving operations ended for the day. Divers found no more bodies in the partly submerged ship.

Four separate investigations will continue Monday. They were being conducted by the shipping line, the Transport Department, city officials of Cleveland and the insurance firm with which the company had insured the vessel for one million dollars.

In addition to the 118 known dead, 34 persons were in hospitals, and 154 were missing. The 173 crew members and 209 other passengers, many of whom were in Toronto when the fire broke out, were saved. All but a score of the approximately 685 persons aboard the vessel when it left Cleveland and Detroit Wednesday and Thursday were Americans.

Many of Missing Reported Home

Red Cross officials said many of those reported missing probably had returned to their homes without reporting to authorities.

Only 34 of the charred bodies of the victims have been identified. Weeping relatives flocked to a make-shift morgue at the Canadian National Exhibition grounds in an effort to identify their loved ones.

Two divers went into the fire-seared hold of the Noronic today searching for more victims. On his third trip down diver Peter Montour brought up parts of a body.

Capt. Norman Roach, general manager of Canadian Steamship Lines, said he doubted that the death toll would rise past 118.

Shipping line officials believed the fire was started by a carelessly-discarded cigarette or cigar.

Some passengers reported faulty fire hoses, fire extinguishers and lifeboats. They said there had been no fire drills and the crew was little help in guiding some panic-stricken passengers to safety.

The crew members blamed drunken passengers and gay parties for much of the panic and confusion.

Ship Like Large Ferry

The Noronic resembled a large, luxurious ferry boat. The 36-year-old ship had four decks, crew members were quartered amidships and astern and lower-rate passenger cabins were located

General Denies West Rebuilding German Army

Berlin, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Maj. Gen. George P. Hays, deputy American Military Governor, today said Soviet charges the Western Powers are rebuilding the German army "are a figment of the imagination."

The Soviet claim, made early today by the Russian news bureau, SNB, said the Western Allies had given tanks, armored cars, machineguns, pistols and carbines to West German police.

The Soviet agency said West German police were being drilled by Allied officers, former Nazi generals and war criminals. (The same charges have been made against Soviet Russia.)

Hays said the Russia assertions "have absolutely no foundation in fact."

Army Reluctant to Clarify Inaction on Nuernberg Film

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

An unfinished documentary film dealing with Germany—described by top American foreign correspondents as "terrific" and "a masterpiece" even in its present rough state—has been turned down by the Department of the Army for public release to movie theaters in the United States.

Mystery surrounds the suppression. No one at the Pentagon professes to know why orders to finish the film were not obeyed. And several accounts are given as to why the Army now refuses to lease it to private producers for completion and public showing.

Made by Army occupation authorities, the movie tells the dramatic story of the rise and fall of Nazism—from the Munich beer halls to the Nuernberg trials and executions.

It graphically describes in detail what Henry L. Stimson has called "the most highly organized and extensive wickedness in history," using the war crimes trials as the vehicle and flashbacks from captured Nazi films to show the actual events.

A German-language version of the film has been shown throughout the Western zones of the Reich to capacity audiences. It has been a smash boxoffice hit.

Yet two years of effort to secure its release to an American producer for completion and exhibition to United States audience have proved futile.

Interested moviemen complain of red-tape, buck-passing and unexplained delays in getting answers to bids and letters sent to the Pentagon.

Inquiring newsmen get unsatisfactory answers when they ask why changes proposed by ranking officials more than two years ago never were incorporated in the

Temperature Drops 13 Degrees

Storm Hits City, Trapping 150,000 Leaving Cup Regatta

A thunderous squall, carrying 45-mile-per-hour winds and heavy sheets of rain, broke over Washington yesterday just in time to snarl the exodus of 150,000 President's Cup Regatta fans pouring out of Hains Point and Gravelly Point.

Autos leaving the areas were trapped in the tieup for almost an hour, causing Park Police Capt. Mark Raspberry to call out all his spare men to help get traffic moving.

Mobs of pedestrians who came to the races by bus were thoroughly drenched by the sudden downpour. In the 20 minutes it lasted, the storm caused .25 inches of rain, Weather Bureau officials said. In the same period the temperature dropped 13 degrees, from 83 to 70.

Almost at the first burst of thunder at 5:55 p. m., lights went out in Falls Church and surrounding areas of Arlington County.

Power went on again in Falls Church in little more than an hour but sections of Arlington were still in darkness several hours later. Power failure at the Idlewood substation in Falls Church was blamed.

In Arlington, lightning broke a window and knocked off a small portion of the roof of a home in the 800 block of Woodrow st.

In the District, lightning struck the home of Herman H. Hill, 1417 Jonquil st. nw., starting a fire in the attic. Damage was confined to that area and to the roof.

With day-long winds up to 30 miles an hour, mincing the Potomac into deep and hazardous troughs, the Regatta was delayed and the big race for the President's Cup was cancelled.

President Truman, winding up a cruise in his yacht, the Williamsburg, transferred to a smaller yacht, the Margie, and tied up to within a few yards of the Regatta's

Ammunition Dump Blasts Rock Cairo

Populace Frightened As 300 Tons of Shells Explode on Outskirts

Cairo, Sept. 18 (AP).—Three hundred tons of old shells blew up today in an ammunition dump on the outskirts of Cairo.

The blast rocked and frightened this city of two million. Minor explosions were continuing four hours later.

All Cairo's fire and police reserves joined soldiers in fighting a fire still raging late tonight in the Mokkatam Hills behind the Citadel, Cairo's 1000-year-old fortress.

The Ministry of Defense announced an unspecified number of soldiers had been wounded. It did not mention any dead.

It said the army had been racing with time to move 600 tons of dangerously deteriorated ammunition out of the dump and throw it into the Mediterranean.

The ministry said the job was half completed when the remaining 300 tons exploded. The big blast set off nearby stores of other ammunition and high explosives, the announcement said.

9 Institutions Get $3,250,000 for Cancer Research

By the United Press

The United States Public Health Service yesterday announced grants of $3,250,000 to nine universities and hospitals for construction of new facilities for cancer research.

The grants follow:

University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, $300,000; University of Chicago, Chicago, $240,000; New England Deaconess Hospital, Boston, $85,000; University of Kansas, Kansas City, $200,000; Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, $750,000; St. Louis University, St. Louis, $625,000; Memorial Hospital for Cancer and Allied Diseases, New York, $250,000; University of California, Los Angeles, $700,000; University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, $200,000.

Miners Seem Sure to Stay Out Today

Coal Diggers Angry Over Suspension of Benefits; No Formal Strike Call Issued

Pittsburgh, Sept. 18 (AP).—A walkout of the Nation's 480,000 United Mine Workers seems certain to begin tomorrow. The miners are adopting a new slogan—no pension fund, no work.

A top UMW official in Pennsylvania's anthracite (hard coal) region said tonight an order "from headquarters" is being circulated telling the 80,000 hard coal miners to stay home tomorrow.

The official refused use of his name. He also refused to explain what he meant by "headquarters" or to disclose where "headquarters" was located.

The report from the hard coal fields came on the heels of statements from UMW leaders in soft coal fields that the 400,000 UMW soft coal diggers are angry over sudden suspension of all welfare fund benefits. The benefits are topped by $100-a-month pensions to retired miners.

No Formal Strike Call

There has been on formal strike call. UMW heads say the miners are acting on their own initiative.

A survey of the West Virginia fields showed that most, if not all, of that State's 120,000 UMW members will stay at home tomorrow. At least two locals met today and formally voted not to report.

UMW District President George J. Titler said in Beckley, W. Va., "it's possible that West Virginia's miners may not return to the pits."

And at Bellaire, Ohio, President Adolf Pacifico of District 6, which includes Northern West Virginia and Eastern Ohio, indicated he does not expect his men to work.

"The miners are pretty angry," commented John P. Busarello, president of UMW District 5 covering the western Pennsylvania soft coal fields. "From what my field workers tell me, there will be very, very few if any miners on the job tomorrow."

In the heart of Pennsylvania's rich soft coal fields at Johnstown, three UMW locals voted to remain out of the pits "until a contract is signed or the welfare fund payments are resumed." Pennsylvania has 100,000 bituminous miners and 80,000 in the anthracite (hard coal) fields.

Eight thousand diggers in Utah and Wyoming led the way by walking out Friday. From Indiana came word of UMW leaders that the State's 8500 miners will not report to work Monday.

Funds Are Separated

In the eastern Pennsylvania anthracite fields there were indications the walkout would be fully effective. M. F. Brennan, president of UMW District 7 in the Hazelton area, declared many hard coal miners have adopted the slogan "no pension fund no work."

The hard coal welfare fund is separate from that in the soft soft coal industry. Activities of the anthracite fund also have been suspended but not until September 30.

There was one optimistic note. That came from a Southern operator who refused use of his name. He said:

"I'll be very much surprised if the mines are down Monday."

It was the action of Southern operators in refusing to continue 20-cents-a-ton royalty payments to the fund that brought about the crisis. The Southern operators contend they don't have to pay, because their contract lapsed.

Marooned for 23 Days on Island, Couple Reports

Melbourne, Australia, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—A ship's captain and his 35-year-old woman friend said today they had been shipwrecked and marooned for 23 days on a small island where they survived on mutton, birds and foul water.

Capt. Alexander Hay, 47, and Miss Thelma Bennett said they left Adelaide August 12 in a 22-ton ketch for a cruise of Pacific Islands.

Two days out their masts were ripped away and their engines wrecked by a storm, leaving them adrift. Later, they said, they took to an open dinghy and drifted to a desolate island in Bass Straights, where they managed to hail passing fishermen yesterday.

Cripps Describes Spur to Exports

London, Sept. 18 (AP).—Sir Stafford Cripps gave this example tonight of how a change in the value of the pound should spur exports:

"An English motor car is exported to the United States; its price is £300 sterling. The American buyer will pay $1200 if the rate of exchange is $4 to £1, but suppose the rate was $5 to £1—many years ago it was nearly that—the buyer would have to pay $1500. If the rate was only $3 to £1—after the First World War it was at one time very near that—he'd only pay $900.

"It's not very difficult to see the consequences of that. First, more Americans would buy that type of car if it cost $900 than if it cost $1200 or $1500, and second, we could buy less in America for $900 than for $1200 or $1500."

Devaluation Won't Cut Prices Much

Experts See Benefits To America Chiefly In Stronger Europe

By Coleman B. Jones
NYHT News Service

American consumers — every man and woman who shops around and has his heart set on something made in Europe—were advised by experts yesterday not to let their hopes for bargains soar too high after reading about the 30.5 per cent reductions in the valuation of foreign currencies in their relationship to the dollar.

The gist of this advice was: As far as you and I are concerned, individually and concretely in terms of our pocketbooks, the great devaluation isn't going to mean much; maybe a little on some things, but not much, and not on many things we want.

Our benefits will come—the experts hope — in an abstract way, even more difficult to define in specific terms than a personal "feeling of well-being," which is what the devaluation program is designed to produce on the general economic health of the free nations.

Chiefly, by halting the drain on the dollar reserves of European nations, it can strengthen their economies sufficiently to enable them to go ahead with other vital recovery measures, all of which can add up to reducing threats to the economic health of the United States and eventually prove of vital, though vaguely realized, benefit to Americans as a whole.

Perhaps the most conspicuous immediate effect on individual bank accounts in this country will be for those who want to own a British-made automobile. The experts believe that, in this item outstandingly, importers will be able to pass on to purchasers a considerable proportion of the 30.5 per cent cut in the pound's dollar value and that British manufacturers, afford a greater opportunity to compete price-wise with American automobiles, will try to step up sales and shipments here.

For those who have a hankering for bargains in Scotch and Irish

Gutt Reveals Other Moves On Currency

International Fund Directors Convene In Special Session On Applications

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Camille Gutt, chairman of the International Monetary Fund, announced Britain's devaluation of the pound here yesterday simultaneously with Sir Stafford Cripps' disclosure of the move to the British people.

While numerous other countries were following in Britain's steps, Gutt pointed out, in reply to questions, that Canada has taken no action as its currency now is on a parity with the dollar.

The International Monetary Fund said it "concurred" in the devaluation action in the cases of Denmark, Australia, India, Norway, Egypt and South Africa. The other three countries which took similar action on their own—Ireland, Israel and New Zealand—are not members of the 48-nation fund.

Applications Separate

Gutt dodged questions about other countries. He said some of the applications for devaluations had been received at the fund Saturday and some yesterday. The fund's directors acted, asking the fund's concurrence in the actions, at a special meeting called at 10:30 yesterday morning.

Gutt sparred with reporters seeking more information. He said that if he had more applications for the fund to act on. "I wouldn't say so." He declined to say which applications were received Saturday and which yesterday. However, Bolton emphasized that the applications did not arrive together—they were, he said, "quite separate."

When asked his opinion of the effect of the action, Gutt replied that he expected the "move to have very early effects that I am not going to mention and long-range effects that I'm not going to predict."

'Most Striking Changes'

Gutt reminded the newsmen the Fund had recommended devaluation in a statement to last week's opening of the joint annual conference of the Fund and the International Bank of Reconstruction and Development at the Shoreham.

He recalled that three years ago he predicted some profound monetary shifts when the world's economy changed from "an abnormal to a normal market."

"You are witnessing one of the most striking changes now—the changing of the value of the pound sterling."

George F. Bolton, British member of the Fund's executive board, was more free to discuss the effects. The British Fund member declared:

"We have been losing reserves at rates we can't stand. We hope

Former King Peter Says U. S. Loan to Tito Is 'Mistake'

Paris, Sept. 18 (U.P.). — Former King Peter of Yugoslavia said today the United States made a "mistake" in granting a loan to Marshal Tito without making it conditional on greater freedom and democracy in Yugoslavia.

The dark haired, 20-year-old former monarch said he did not think the current cold war between Tito and the Kremlin would lead to a shooting war. He said he doubted Russia was either prepared or desirous of a new war.

Peter said he would be willing to return to Yugoslavia, with Tito as Premier, but only on condition that Tito submit to a free democratic election. He saw no possibility of Tito agreeing to such a proposal.

Pound Traced To Saxon Days

London, Sept. 18 (AP).—British money began as an ancient Saxon pound of silver.

The pound once was the money standard for much of the world's trade. Now it is eclipsed by the dollar.

The old Saxon pound weight of silver was kept in the Tower of London. It was coined into 20 shillings of 240 pence. These same units exist today—pounds, shillings and pence.

But the traders of the world markets have found them less desirable since the end of the Second World War.

So the pound sagged on the free markets.

On the first of this month, the Swiss free market quoted a pound at $2.80, the exact figure to which it was devalued today.

Buyers throughout the world complained that British prices, based on the pound at $4.03, were too high.

France Stops All Trading In Currency

Stock Transactions Also Suspended as Result of Pound Cut

Paris, Sept. 18 (NYHT).—The French government tonight suspended until further notice all trading in foreign currency and gold. It also ordered stock exchange operations to be closed down for tomorrow.

This action, taken immediately after Sir Stafford Cripps' announcement of the pound sterling's devaluation, was regarded as a forecast of a minor devaluation of the franc. Such an adjustment might come tomorrow night at an extraordinary meeting of the cabinet.

The Ministry of Finance communique announcing suspension of foreign exchange trading made a provision for tourists and travelers. The official statement said these persons would be supplied with all their requirements.

Queuille Called Back

Premier Henri Queuille was called back to Paris from a speaking engagement in the south of France to deal with the financial action. At his office and residence at the Hotel Matignon, he met with Edgar Faure, budget director for the government; Jean Monnet, chief of the recovery plan bearing his name, and experts from the finance ministry.

There was no indication that the franc, which has made a remarkable recovery in the past several months, was in line for a major devaluation like the pound sterling. Faure told the press as much after the closed meeting with the Premier.

The British action, he said, was not altogether surprising and it definitely was "not a sign of weakness in the French money." What the British decision would result in, he added, was "a general stabilization."

Minister Flying From U. S.

Before taking its own position, Faure went on, the French government "is waiting on a certain number of elements." Among these was the opinion of Maurice Petsche, Minister of Finance, due in Paris tomorrow morning by air from the International Monetary Fund talks in Washington.

In any event, there will have to be a new rate fixed between the franc and the pound sterling, and this is expected to be topmost on the list of the urgent cabinet meeting tomorrow at 6 p. m. There have been unofficial reports that a new rate of 1100 francs to the pound would be established.

Taylor Calls Fascism Main Danger to U. S.

Senator Glen Taylor (D., Idaho), said yesterday the United States has more to fear from "resurgent Fascism" than from a "military assault from Communism."

The Senator, who broke recently with Henry Wallace's Progressive Party, made the statement in a radio attack on "wasteful arms spending." The address was carried over station WWDC here.

Cripps Tells Of Decision; Nine Nations Follow Suit

Determined Course Before Washington Parleys, Chancellor Of Exchequer Says

London, Sept. 18 (AP).—Great Britain cut 30½ per cent off the value of the pound sterling tonight in a last-ditch bid to spur her exports and ease her dollar crisis.

Up to now it has taken $4.03 to buy a pound at the official rate. Under the new rate it will take only $2.80. Thus it will require fewer dollars to buy a pound's worth of goods—and Britain expects that to start her exports rolling into dollar-area countries at a new, fast pace.

Nine other countries also cut the value of their money in terms of dollars. South Africa cut her pound from $4.03 to $2.80, like Britain. New Zealand cut to the same rate. Australia dropped her pound from $3.22 to $2.24.

India, a third country in the sterling area, reduced the rupee from 30.225 cents to 21.

Denmark and Norway Devalue

Denmark made the dollar worth 6.90714 kroner instead of 4.79901. Norway made the dollar worth 7.14286 kroner instead of 4.96278.

In Dublin it was announced that the Irish pound had been cut from $4.03 to $2.80, matching the British cut.

Israel announced at Tel Aviv that its pound was being devalued from $4.03 to $2.80 also. However, since the effective rate of the Israeli pound has actually been only $3.03, the change is not drastic.

Egypt cut the value of the Egyptian pound to $2.87156, from $4.133.

Holland and Sweden are among countries due to make announcements later. The Indonesian guilder is being devalued, but the amount had not been announced today.

Sir Stafford Cripps announced the British decision to the nation in a broadcast at 9:15 p. m. (3:15 p. m., EST). The cut in effect brought the pound down to the free market rate—it has been selling for $2.80 on the Swiss market, but only the official $4.03 rate was recognized by the British in international trade.

Cripps disclosed that the decision to devalue had been made before he and Ernest Bevin, Foreign Secretary, left England August 31 to attend the American-British-Canadian monetary talks in Washington.

He said:

"We did not then announce it because we wanted to tell our American and Canadian friends first and to inform all the members of the Commonwealth, and also because it takes a little time to arrange these matters."

Banks and stock exchanges will be closed in Britain Monday as the new rates go into effect. The Treasury announced the domestic price of gold will be adjusted accordingly. This will mean that

Press Reaction In London Varies From Cool to Icy

London (Monday), Sept. 19 (AP).—British press reaction to the cut in the pound ranged from cool to icy, although most newspapers agreed it was necessary. Several were shocked that the cut was so drastic.

Lord Rothermere's Conservative Daily Mail called the cut "a great shock—a terrific shock." Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express, also Conservative, asked why the pound was not allowed to find its own level in world money markets.

"We need not have given ourselves over to the domination of Wall Street," the Express said, "but the Socialists wanted American tobacco for cigarettes. They wanted films from Hollywood."

The Daily Herald, pro-Labor Party, warned Britain's struggle would be "hard and prolonged."

Almost all papers spoke of an inevitable rise in living costs here.

Bernt Balchen Flies Over North Pole in C-54

Oslo, Norway, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—A United States Air Force C-54 Skymaster with famed American Artic Exporer and Aviator Col. Bernt Balchen at the controls landed here today after a 4000-mile flight from Alaska over the North Pole.

Dispute Over Benefits

Ching Trying Again to Avert Steel Strike by One Million

By The Associated Press

The Government will try again today to stave off a strike of one million CIO steelworkers only a week away.

Steel men and CIO President Philip Murray will sit down with Conciliation Chief Cyrus S. Ching, who invited them to try to work out a solution to the "debate by telegram" which followed a presidential fact-finding board's report.

The board vetoed a fourth-round wage increase, but recommended pensions and social insurance at a cost of 10 cents a working hour to be paid for by the steel companies.

Murray, spearhead of the CIO's previous postwar wage drive, agreed to accept the board's recommendation. United States Steel Corp., leader in the steel industry, agreed to negotiate on the basis of the report but refused to accept it in entirety as Murray had done.

United States Steel President Benjamin F. Fairless said the company would pay up to four cents an hour for social insurance, but the cost of that and pensions should be shared by employes.

That touched off a debate between Murray and United States Steel, which continued all week and threatened to erupt in an industry-wide strike when the current truce expires next Sunday night.

The steel board's report was handed to President Truman a week ago Saturday. The President asked the parties to accept it as a basis for negotiations and offered Ching's services if they were needed to smooth the way.

On Friday, when Ching saw that the parties were quarreling to such an extent that peace was threatened again, he sent his invitations.

The million-member Steelworkers union, which Murray heads along with the CIO, agreed to a 60-day strike truce in July when the fact-finding board was appointed, after failure of agreement on new working terms. The union bowed again to presidential pressure last week and extended that truce until September 25.

Some Government officials today feared that the threat of a coal walkout today would hurt Ching's chances of settling the steel dispute. A coal shutdown would take some of the sting out of Murray's threatened steel strike, because the steel mills could not operate long anyway without coal coming in.

3 Men Swim English Channel In Same Day to Set Record

Dover, England, Sept. 18 (AP).—Greek Maj. Zason A. Ziganos completed swimming the English Channel from France to England at 11:45 p. m. (5:45 p. m. EST.)

Ziganos stumbled ashore at Fan Bay, just outside the Dover breakwater, after being in the water five minutes less than 19 hours.

He made Channel history by being the third man within 24 hours to cross the turbulent strait between Britain and France.

Two Egyptian army men swam the Channel in opposite directions earlier today.

Coastguardsmen at nearby St. Margaret's Bay reported tonight that Sgt. Marie Hassan landed there from France at 9:12 p. m. (3:12, EST).

Just after midnight this morning, Lieut. Hassan Rehim completed a swim from England to France.

A fourth swimmer, Dr. George Brewer, 58, London physician, failed to make it on an attempt to swim from here to France. It was his thirteenth unsuccessful effort to master the Channel.

Two persons tried it yesterday. One failed. One made it. Tini Jonker, an 18-year-old Dutch flower girl, had to be pulled from the water because of seasickness after swimming five hours.

Lieutenant Rehim, 41, of the Egyptian army, swam from Dover to Cap Gris Nez in 15 hours and 58 minutes, thus becoming the third man in history to have made the swim both ways. He crossed from France to England last year.

Jessup Puts Emphasis on Asia In Statement of U. S. Policy

Lake Success, N. Y., Sept. 18 (U.P.). — American Ambassador-at-Large Dr. Philip C. Jessup today made public the official United States position on top issues facing the United Nations General Assembly, and he particularly emphasized problems in Asia.

Jessup urged the Assembly, which opens Tuesday, to seek a solution to African as well as Asiatic problems through constructive measures like President Truman's "bold new program" of technical aid.

Jessup warned that efforts to provoke the people of Asia and Africa to violent uprisings "may absorb their energies for a time but can never solve their problems."

The American delegation, he revealed, will push for "an independent Libya in the relatively near future;" a go-slow policy on Palestine; full approval of the proposed U. N. technical-aid program; continuation of the Greek and Korean commissions; and possibly submission of the dispute over the Balkan church trials to the international court.

Jessup's statement was made at a meeting of the American Association for the United Nations at New York.

The diplomat underscored American concern over the East by devoting a good half of his speech to the problem of rising nationalism in Asia and Africa.

Jessup said the United States believed peoples desiring inde-

Bishop Consecrated As Aide to Beran

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—The Roman Catholic Church yesterday secretly consecrated Bishop Kajetan Matousek as auxiliary, or assistant, to Archbishop Josef Beran, who is semiprisoner in his palace, it was revealed today.

Matousek was the third new bishop consecrated in Czechoslovakia in the past five weeks as the church appeared to be reinforcing its top command for a showdown fight with the government over the new church control bill.

Church sources said the ceremony took place Saturday in St. Ignatius Church, on Prague's Charles Square.

Bishop Antonio Eltschner, who is Berna's other auxiliary, was in charge of the ceremony. No other bishop was present.

The Roman Catholic primate of Czechoslovakia has remained in his suite in his palace here since mid-June. Church sources have said he is guarded by state secret police. The Communist government has said he is free to come and go.

Matousek does not have a diocese, but became "bishop of Serigene," an ancient Czech title. Thus there was no conflict with the government, since state approval is required only if bishops are named to diocese.

Dr. Frantisek Onderek, a member of the Catholic Church's board of bishops, told the United Press by telephone today that his approval of the church bill, announced yesterday by the government, extended only to provisions for increased salaries for priests.

Onderek's name appears on the Czech bishops' memorandum, which tells the government that certain parts of the bill are unacceptable.

Dr. Onderek said he had asked clergy under his jurisdiction to call off their campaign against the proposed new bill so they would "not get into trouble."

Onderek's action was interpreted by the government yesterday as full support of the bill, which transforms priests into civil servants. It was announced as such to the nation in a special radio broadcast last night.

Romanians Held Culling Huge Army

Vienna, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Diplomats recently returned from Romania said today that Marshal Tito's Cominform neighbor is "conducting a secret military mobilization of almost wartime proportions."

The diplomats, whose names and nationalities are withheld by request, said almost all Romanians "who at any time had served as officers are being called into the army."

They said the number of enlisted men drafted into the army has at least doubled over last year.

American quarters in Vienna confirmed reports of recent Romanian mobilization but were not familiar with extent of the call ups.

The diplomatic sources said the general opinion among Communist government officials in Bucharest was that there would be no war with Marshal Tito's Yugoslavia "for the time being."

The sources said "a considerable number of Romanian army officers have been and are still being sent to Russia for Soviet army training."

Cluj, in northern Romania, has been transformed into a "Soviet army garrison in town during the past four weeks," the sources said.

They said Communist officials in Bucharest took "little pain to dispel apparently justified rumors the Soviet garrison of Cluj operates as headquarters of the Romanian army."

The diplomatic sources said there were indications of an underground movement "which has direct communications abroad." They declined to explain.

Belgrade Blames Reds For War Psychosis

Belgrade, Sept. 18 (NYHT).—The Cominform has been moving troops along Yugoslavia's northern frontiers with the aim of creating a "war psychosis" between the eastern bloc and Belgrade, the Yugoslav Communist Party paper Borba said today.

The paper accused the Soviet Union of continuing to reject the "resolute endeavors" of the Yugoslav Communist Party to settle the differences between Belgrade and Moscow and said the Russian leaders are showing "increased hostility" towards Yugoslavia.

The leaders of the Soviet Union are daily becoming "more and more nervous" as a result of the failure of their efforts to oust the Yugoslav regime and as a result they are constantly becoming more "unscrupulous," the paper said.

Borba said any person of normal intelligence is insulted at being asked by the Cominform to believe the fabricated evidence being presented at the Budapest trial.

Bandit Croons For Reporter

London, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Maria Cyliakus, pretty Swedish reporter, wrote today in the Sunday newspaper, the People, she had tracked down Sicilian bandit Salvatore Giuliano in his mountain resort and stayed to hear him sing a love song.

She said she went to Sicily determined "to know this strange man who could shoot down police in cold blood—and on the other hand relieve the distress of the poor, give generously to enable young lovers to marry . . ."

After hiking alone in the mountains, she said, she found Giuliano, a handsome man with "warm brown eyes . . . and thick lashes." She said his strong hands were well shaped, his finger nails well kept. She said at first she was afaraid she would be shot.

"I shivered," she wrote, "as I rembered the corpses that had been found bearing a slip of paper with the words, 'Thus Giuliano will deal with all spies.'"

But, she said, she convinced him she was indeed a Swedish journalist and finally persuaded him to sing a love ballad—a sad song about an American soldier who returned to Naples to fetch his Italian bride.

Miss Cyliakus said she remained to watch the Sicilian "Robin Hood" fight one battle with the police and then was escorted down from his hideout by henchmen of her "perfect host."

Chicago Airport Named in Honor Of Comdr. O'Hare

Chicago, Sept. 18 (AP).—Chicago's new monster international airport was named today in honor of the late Lieut. Comdr. Edward H. (Butch) O'Hare, an air hero of World War II.

It was dedicated by Mrs. Selma O'Hare of St. Louis, a serious quiet little Gold Star mother, who said her son, Edward, "is the symbol of thousands of others who died, as he did, for their country."

Lieutenant Commander O'Hare, a Chicagoan, won the Medal of Honor posthumously for his single-handed defense of the aircraft carrier Lexington February 20, 1942, against a formation of seven Japanese bombers

Three of Same Family Swim 14 Miles

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MANHATTAN TO CONEY—John Mercer, 53, of Fall River, Mass., his pretty blonde daughter, Althea, 21 and 18-year-old son, John, jr., emerge from the water at Coney Island Sunday after completing a 14-mile swim from lower Manhattan. The girl landed at a different spot than the men but joined them in coming out of the water. Two other daughters, 11-year-old twins, and their brother, 13, dropped out of the swim earlier. The entire Mercer family with exception of Mrs. Mercer, the mother, entered the water off lower Manhattan in what the senior Mercer said was a "bone-up" for a try at the English Channel next year

Bold Program Action Out for This Session

By The Associated Press

Approval early next year of a bill to start President Truman's "bold new program" for developing backward areas of the world was forecast yesterday by Chairman Maybank (D., S. C.) of the Senate Banking Committee.

Maybank told a reporter he had rejected pleas by Commerce Department officials for committee action on the bill in this Congress. The measure would permit the Export-Import Bank to guarantee, for a fee, that Americans who put capital into foreign enterprises would get it back.

"The Administration would like to have action in this session, but I think it is impossible to get the bill up now," Maybank said. "But we are going to take it up as soon as we meet in January and I expect it to be approved quickly."

The Banking Committee bill represents the private investment section of President Truman's proposal to channel American capital and know-how into undeveloped foreign fields.

Mr. Truman, in his inaugural address, sprang his "bold new program" for bringing scientific and industrial progress to underdeveloped areas. He called for international cooperation in it.

Chairman Spence of the House Banking Committee has said that the guarantees won't include any Government pledge that investors will make a profit. He said, however, there might be guarantees that investors can convert any profit they might make into American dollars and that they can get their money back if their investments abroad are seized or destroyed.

Senator Williams (R., Del.) said he doesn't think there will be any partisan opposition to the investment guarante proposal.

"I don't think party lines will play any part in this," he said. "It will be a question of each Senator's deciding for himself whether he thinks the Government ought to go into that field."

1000 Junks Used

Chinese Say Red Armada Seizes Island

Hong Kong, Sept. 18 (UP).—A Communist armada of more than 1000 junks has overwhelmed the Nationalist garrison on Pingtan Island, only 80 miles from Formisa, Chinese reports said today.

Other units smashed into Changchow, last stronghold barring entry into Amoy, whose capture would give the Red armies a solid hold on the Fukien Province "invasion coast." Changchow is 25 miles west of Amoy.

The Communist radio forecast an attack soon on Formosa itself.

Chinese dispatches from Kukong, 118 mines north of Canton, indicated that increasing numbers of Communist regulars were pouring into Kwangtung Province for an assault against the Canton-Hankow railway.

Reds Begin to Organize Government for China

Shanghai, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Communists today announced they had started organizing a formal Red Government for China.

The official New China News Agency stated that a three-day preliminary meeting of the Political Consultative Conference had just concluded in Peiping.

The announcement said a plenary session would be held shortly, but that drafts of "organic law for the Central People's Government and the Political Consultative Conference were approved in principle" by the preliminary meeting.

This indicates that major decisions on the new government already have been made and that the forthcoming plenary session will be a rubber stamp.

MacArthur Policy Deemed Official Now

Tokyo, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Big Three agreement on matters of Far Eastern policy, announced yesterday in Washington, were regarded in Tokyo as a top level indorsement of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's stewardship over Japan.

While the "matters of concern" in the Far East in which Great Britain, France and the United States found themselves in accord embraced a wider area than Japan, the course of the occupation was seen as the one cardinal point which received their stamp of approval.

Although American occupation administrators withheld their official comment they privately expressed the belief that now Great Britain and France at least would offer no objection to allowing Japan more and more responsibility in managing their own affairs—peace treaty or no peace treaty.

Thus a consistent MacArthur program for the past two years—over some objections in Washington and bitter opposition in the Far Eastern Commission—became the official United States policy.

Drop the Stones, Louie

Managil, Blue Nile Province, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, Sept. 18 (AP).—A 60-year-old Sudanese was warned by the district commissioner's office today that he would be arrested if there were any more complaints about him throwing stones at his grandfather.

Connally Sure Arms Aid Bill Won't Be Cut

By the United Press

Senator Connally (D., Tex.) yesterday said Congress will move fast to help ring with steel the newly formed Western Military High Command.

As chairman of a special 25-man committee on arms assistance, Connally will open Senate debate today on the Administration bill for an initial $1,314,010,000 program to arm free nations against Communist aggression.

He told the United Press he was sure the bill will pass this week with "plenty of votes to spare."

Senator George (D., Ga.) posed the most menacing threat to the bill with his plan to slash from one billion to 300 million the arms and money earmarked for pact nations.

A Waste of Money

Connally, however, was confident the move will fail. But he tempered his victory forecast by saying the margin will not be as great as the 82 to 13 vote by which the Senate ratified the pact itself.

George took issue with a section of the committee report revealing that France would receive the lion's share of the aid. He said preliminary plans call for rearming about nine French divisions and shipping about 35 million dollars in American machine tools for French arms plants.

George protested that the military spending program, under which America's excess weapons plus some new guns, tanks and planes would be shipped, was not much more than "a waste of money."

Chairman Tydings (D., Md.) of the Armed Services Committee revealed meantime, that the only arms that will be sent to Europe from reserve United States stocks are those in excess of equipment needed if 4,500,000 Americans were mobilized and equipped for war.

"We're only giving what we call our excess mobilization stocks to Europe," he said. "It is not our first-line equipment."

Red Arms Budget Up

The committee, in approving the Administration bill, warned that Russia's armies are growing bigger and better, but made it clear that no effort will be made to match mobilization through United States arms shipments.

Its report said Russia now has more than five million men under arms and has increased its 1949 military budget by 19 per cent.

The command organization set up Saturday by the Foreign Ministers of the 12-pact nations will have its permanent headquarters in Washington.

'Optimistic' Vishinsky Leaves Shannon En Route to U. S.

Shannon Airport, Ireland, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky left here at 9:05 p. m. (4:05 p. m., EDT) by transatlantic plane today for New York and the opening of the United Nations General Assembly Tuesday.

With six other Russians, Vishinsky traveled on the Pan-American clipper Pride of America, which set down at Frankfurt, Brussels and London. At Frankfurt, Vishinsky said he was "an optimist" when questioned on world affairs.

At Brussels Vishinsky went into a huddle in a locked room at the airport with a 10-man delegation from the Soviet Embassy which met the plane. The room was guarded by Belgian state security police and two Soviet plainclothesmen.

The Russians reportedly asked Pan-American officials to delay the flight "for two or three hours" so they could prolong the conference, but the airline declined on the grounds it would upset their schedule.

Just before boarding the plane at London airport, Vishinsky told reporters, "Stalin's health is excellent."

Jessup States U. S. Policies

pendence should be given it "quickly and generously."

But he warned against a disorderly shift to independence "which merely precedes the equally sudden dictatorship of a small group acting under the direction of a foreign power."

He said the United States would help independent people everywhere protect their freedom from external or internal attack.

Jessup outlined American policy on these top-drawer issues:

1. ITALIAN COLONIES. The United States favors independence for Libya in the near future (reported to mean two to five years); cession of all but the western province of Eritrea to Ethiopia; incorporation of the western province in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan either directly or through some form of trusteeship; and Italian administration of Somaliland under U. N. trusteeship.

2. INDONESIA. The United States is optimistic that The Hague conference now in session will bring "broad agreement" on an independent Indonesia tied to the Dutch crown, and that therefore the Assembly will not have to deal with the problem.

3. PALESTINE. The United States hopes the Assembly will provide continued support for the hundreds of thousands of Arab refugees uprooted by last year's Palestine warfare. But this fall's Assembly cannot be expected to resolve Arab-Israeli political differences since the full reports of the Palestine conciliation commission will not be ready in time.

4. KOREA. The United States feels that the Soviet-boycotted Korean watchdog commission should be strengthened and kept on the scene until the security of the U. N.-recognized South Korean government is no longer threatened.

5. TECHNICAL AID FOR UNDEVELOPED AREAS. The United States fully supports the recommendation of the Economic and Social Council for a conference on organizing the U. N. technical aid program and raising needed funds.

6. GREECE. The United States believes there has been "real progress" in the past year in reducing the guerilla threat and cutting aid from abroad, particularly from Yugoslavia, which "has apparently ceased" sending aid to the rebel forces. The on-the-spot commission, boycotted by Greece's three northern neighbors, should be kept on the job.

7. BALKAN CHURCH TRIALS. The United States will push for U. N. action to induce the Communist governments involved to use treaty machinery for settlement of disputes or to send the case to the International Court of Justice.

8. FREEDOM OF INFORMATION. The United States wants the proposed convention on freedom of information dropped for the present because it feels there is little chance of getting general approval of a convention that would not "contain narrow restrictive provisions and sweeping exceptions." Instead, a "broad affirmative provision" should be included in the covenant on human rights.

9. ATOMIC ENERGY DISARMAMENT. The United States is "under no illusions" that the deadlocks can be broken at this time, but reaffirms its willingness to scrap its atomic stockpile when a foolproof international atomic control system is in effect.

Captain Describes Vain Rescue Efforts

Toronto, Sept. 18 (AP). — Capt. William Taylor, master of the fire-swept Noronic, last night told from his bed a story of a fierce and hopeless battle to save his ship and passengers.

His own face scorched and his right hand in bandages, the 65-year-old mariner mourned the disaster and said sorrowfully:

"I had hoped to end my career without loss of life."

He had returned from a visit ashore, gone aboard on a lower deck, walked up to his own cabin on A deck without seeing any sign of fire.

This is the captain's story:

"I was just entering my cabin when a wheelsman came and told me there was a fire on C deck.

"I told him to go put in an alarm from the dock, if one had not already been put in from there, though all I expected to find was a little smoke.

"I turned and ran down from my cabin door on A deck, down the stairway amidships to C deck.

"When I arrived, there was so much smoke that I couldn't go aft of the stairway. Then I knew it was a lot more than a minor blaze.

"I hollered, 'Fire,' to the people on the dock and as I proceeded through the ship, I cut over to the port side and went out on deck and pulled down a hose and opened it.

"I went back and went down to 'D' deck. The rooms of the crew and passengers there were wide open with no one in them. I visited the crew's quarters aft and went down through the engine-room and from there out to the dock.

"I asked people there, 'are you sure everyone is out' and decided that they couldn't be. I went back to 'C' deck and it was ablaze all the way through. It was hot there.

"I went a second time to 'D' deck and used the hose again. Water by this time was up to the door jamb.

"I went along the dock to the bow to see whether I could see anyone on board, and tried to go back but people on the dock stopped me.

"So far as humanly possible I covered every part of the ship I could get to, to make sure every one was aroused.

"Throughout, members of the crew were doing their jobs as well as they could and passengers were reasonably cool under the circumstances.

"The fire started on 'C,' which is the promenade deck. As we were carrying no freight and there was no explosion, the likeliest place for its start was in some passenger's cabin."

right below the main deck. The 390-foot, 6800 ton vessel drew little water and all cabins were located above the waterline.

The flames first broke out on the promenade deck and spread to the boat deck above. Since most of the cabins were below these decks, and the embarkation doors on their decks closed, many passengers were trapped in the flames.

Wreck Victim Blocks Road To Get Aid

Rawlins, Wyo., Sept. 17 (U.P.).—The tragic story of a man who crawled to a highway but had to build a barricade of rocks and brush to halt traffic and get help for himself and five other victims of a one-car smashup was revealed here tonight.

The crash, which occurred near Red Desert, Wyo., 56 miles west of here, took the life of a baby and sent five tourists to Rawlins Memorial Hospital.

Hospital authorities identified the injured as William J. Hicks, Strawberry Plains, Tenn.; Robert Earl Scott, St. Louis, Mo., William Buxton, Fort Scott, Kan.; Cary Washburn, Whiddy Island, Wash.; Viola G. Henry, 22, Bellingham, Wash.

The dead baby was believed the child of Mrs. Henry.

Authorities said the driver apparently fell asleep, the car plunged off the road, and the occupants were knocked unconscious. One crawled to the road, where he was unable to stop passing motorists for help until he constructed the crude road block—about five hours after the accident occurred.

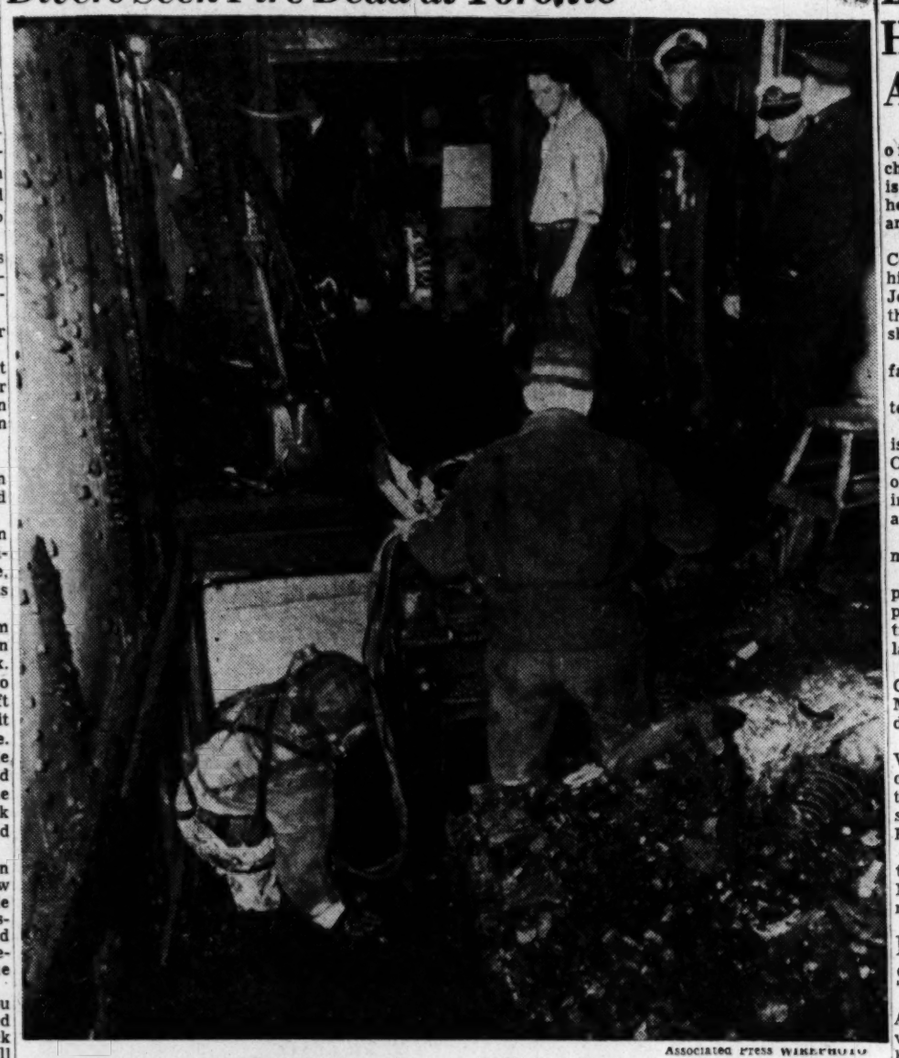

A truck driver halted and took the victims to the hospital.

Professor Believes Egyptians Built Temple at Stonehenge

London, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—The fabulous Druid temple of Stonehenge on Salisbury Plain may be of ancient Egyptian origin, Prof. P. L. Collignon, Oxford University anthropologist, believes.

In a lecture at the Atlantean research center here, Collignon reviewed his work on the controversies which have arisen around Stonehenge since the Ninth century.

The most interesting theory, he said, was provided by Geoffrey of Monmouth, one of the earliest writers on the subject.

"Must Mean Egypt"

Geoffrey claimed the sacred stones were "brought by giants of old from the farthest coast of Africa and placed in Ireland."

"We can't blame him for not knowing he ought to have said Pembrokeshire instead of Ireland, but as for his statement that they came from the farthest coast of Africa, we know today this is untrue," Collignon said.

Modern geological science, the Oxford professor said, has proved the stones could not have come from the "farthest coast of Africa" as claimed by Geoffrey Monmouth.

"He can't possibly mean the Cape of Good Hope and he must mean Egypt. There is nothing else he can mean.

"But as the stones certainly did not come from Egypt there can be only one explanation, and that is that Stonehenge was built by Egyptians," Collignon said.

He pointed out that the name given by several early historians to Stonehenge was "Killaraus."

"Killaraus," he said, "is derived from the simple Celtic word Kil which means temple and the ordinary Egyptian word R-Aus, which means Ra the sun god and Osiris.

"The name Killaraus, therefore, means the temple of Ra and Osiris," he explained.

Mammoth's Tusk, Bones Discovered

Aberdeen, S. D., Sept. 17 (AP).—Two South Dakota geologists said today they believe they have dug up a tusk and the bones of a granddady mammoth.

Uncovered on a farm near here were a 12½-foot tusk, a skull, tooth, some ribs and part of a hind foot of a mammoth.

The discovery was reported by James D. Bump, director of the museum of geology at the South Dakota School of Mines and Technology at Rapid City, and his assistant, H. E. Matin.

Bump said the tusk and bones probably are more than 50,000 years old.

Bottles, Beds Highlight Case Against Judge

Atlanta, Sept. 18 (AP).—The case of Judge Robert Carpenter, charged with attempted murder, is headed for a jury which has heard a background tale of bottles and bedrooms.

The State charged the Fulton County Civil Court judge chased his onetime good friend, Attorney John Lockwood, 53, four blocks the night of July 27 and tried to shoot him to death.

Lockwood was wounded in the face and eye.

But the shooting was given scant testimony.

The case rambled through tourist courts and hotel bedrooms. Opposing sides placed the 44-year-old Judge and Mrs. Estelle Manful in some of them and Lockwood and Mrs. Carpenter in others.

Testimony of alleged drinking mounted as the case continued.

Defense Attorney Ellis Barrett pictured Lockwood and Mrs. Carpenter "running around on country roads, drinking liquor out of large bottles."

The prosecution asserted Judge Carpenter deserted his home for Mrs. Manful and was "stupidly drunk."

All of which led Presiding Judge Virlyn B. Moore to observe, "The case is getting way off trail. I thought we was (sic) trying to try something about a shooting out on Peachtree st."

Judge Moore said he expected the case to go to the jury either Monday afternoon or Tuesday morning.

Man Accused of Rape Slain With Machete

Tiajuana, Mexico, Sept. 18 (AP). A man accused of attempted rape was hacked to death with a machete here by the husband of the woman in the case.

Police reported that Guizar Revilla, 40, was chopped down in a vacant lot. His skull was split twice and both hands were nearly severed.

Margarito Chaboya, 43, father of six children, was named by police as the slayer.

Missing Boy, 3, Found Dead In Family's Unused Ice Box

Fresno, Calif., Sept. 18 (U.P.). The body of tiny, 3-year-old Edward Ryder was found in the compartment of an old ice box in his family's yard here today, 24 hours after he was reported missing and feared kidnaped.

The child's body was discovered at 10 a. m. today by his uncle, Lester Peck, of Tulare, who recalled playing in a similar death trap when he was a child.

Little Edward's grandmother, Mrs. Golda Peck, fainted when the baby's body was discovered. When she revived, she sobbingly told police how she had opened one section of the ice box at about 12:30 p. m. yesterday and found the boy's two puppies inside.

She said she didn't investigate the other compartments of the box because she was convinced they were "too small" for the child to be inside.

The puppies were still alive when rescued by the grandmother, but Coroner A. M. Yest said he believed the boy "undoubtedly was already dead at that time." He pointed out the child was in a much smaller compartment than the puppies, and would have used up the meager supply of oxygen much faster.

Detective H. P. Krumbine said, "it looks like just another one of those tragic accidents." He said he believed it was possible for the boy to have pulled the snap-latch door closed behind him.

Members of the boy's family and police milled around within a few inches of his body all day yesterday as they investigated his disappearance as a possible kidnaping.

Pound Sterling Devalued to $2.80

Britain will pay more of its money for gold imports.

Cripps said Britain must earn more dollars and spend less. Devaluation, he asserted, will help the country sell more goods and services for dollars. This is especially important because the European Recovery Program ends in 1952, when "we must stand on our own feet in the matter of dollars."

Cripps, whose job as Chancellor of the Exchequer corresponds to Secretary of the Treasury Snyder's, said the devaluation will not change what is known as the internal value of the pound. He observed:

"Your savings, your wages and salaries will buy you just as much as they did before of all the things that we produce ourselves, or that we buy from other countries who make similar changes in their dollar rate of exchange."

Price of Bread Going Up

Britain will, however, have to pay more pounds for the same quantity of goods she buys in countries pegging their money to the dollar.

Wheat and flour imported from the United States and Canada—both dollar countries—will go up in price here. As a result a loaf of bread which costs 4½ pence yesterday must go up to sixpence. That is an equivalent rise of about 8 cents to 10. The price of flour will go up correspondingly in about two weeks, Cripps said, unless other countries devalue their currencies to make a smaller increase sufficient.

These were among reactions in various countries:

India—Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday were designated public holidays "to obviate speculation and dislocation of markets." The new rupee rate will be effective before the holidays end. Banks and commodity markets were ordered to stay closed until Thursday.

Holland—The government withdrew all exchange rates that have been in effect since 1945, and announced that some step similar to Britain's will be taken. Trading in foreign currency was forbidden. Stock exchanges will be closed today and tomorrow. The government promised new exchange rates will be published as soon as possible.

Switzerland—Swiss currency has been sought after as much as dollars. Financial circles feared that a devaluuation of the Swiss franc may be necessary to prevent a disastrous blow to the tourist trade.

Sweden Suspends Payments

Sweden—The government will meet today to consider devaluation, Prime Minister Tage Erlanger said. The Bank of Sweden suspended all payments with other countries pending a decision on the new rate.

Poland—Businessmen expressed belief that increases will be necessary in the prices of eggs and bacon sent to British breakfast tables. A rise in the price of soft wood, another Polish export to Britain, also was considered probable. Offsetting these may be an increased demand in Poland for such sterling area exports as mining machinery and wool.

Egypt—All banks will be closed today. The value of the Egyptian pound is cut from $4.183 to $2.871.

Czechoslovakia — Cripps' announcement of devaluation was reported without comment by the government-controlled Czech radio.

Canadian Devaluation Hinted

Canada—There was some speculation in Ottawa that the government might devalue the Canadian dollar, officially valued at par with the United States but discounted from 6 to 10 cents in day-to-day trading. Finance Minister Douglass Abbott met with his economic advisers. He was reported preparing a formal statement on the government's reaction to Britain's move.

South Africa.—Prime Minister D. F. Malan announced his country's devaluation in a radio broadcast. Today was declared a bank holiday. All stock exchanges also will be closed.

Ireland.—The government announced, along with devaluation, that dealings in foreign currencies will be suspended until tomorrow. Banks will remain open.

Greek Markets Close

Greece.—Stock exchanges and all banks closed Monday. Premier Alexander Diomedes said "devaluation is of world-wide significance and the measures which the Greek government must take require attention." He said a further announcement will be made in due course.

Australia.—Australia, while cutting the value of her pound 30½ per cent in relation to the dollar, will keep its ratio to the pound sterling at 125 to 100. That is, it takes 125 Australian pounds to equal 100 British pounds.

France cut the value of the franc 50 per cent in January, 1948, and this brought the official value of the franc to approximately the black market value, with the result that the black market in France was dried up. Finland also recenly devalued. Soviet Russia made a revaluation of its money, but in such a way that the effect was not clearcut on other nations. The value of the Soviet ruble, as imposed by Moscow, has been firm for years in term of dollars.

Latins Expect Realignment

Fall Bounties Shown at Community Fair

INTERESTED CROWDS view exhibits Sunday at the seventh annual Harvest Show at Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, Bethesda. Above is a general view from the balcony

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Smith, 5404 Glenwood rd., Bethesda, Md., won top honors yesterday at the seventh annual Bethesda-Chevy Chase Harvest Show. The show was sponsored by more than a dozen garden associations in Bethesda, Chevy Chase and in Washington. A record 1200 persons viewed more than 300 exhibits in the Chevy Chase High School.

The Smiths received a $25 U. S. Saving Bond for taking a ribbon in practically every class they entered from flowers and vegetables to their hobby, a collection of old china.

The awards were presented by Frederick W. Lang, general chairman.

Smith, an employe of the Department of Interior, won a similar sweepstakes last week at a show sponsored by the Public Buildings Administration.

Second place in the event was won by Mrs. Lauretta Ruhoff, 401 Carroll ave., Takoma Park, Md.

Two Washingtonians scored in the dahlia classes. Dr. H. B. Parker, 6142 30th st. nw., held second place with more than 50 flowers on display. In the novice class, Mrs. Frank Brosky, 212 Rittenhouse st. nw., was the winner.

Top honors for roses were taken by Mrs. R. C. Beverly, Alexandria, first; Harold J. Holt, Baltimore, second; and G. G. Holley, 4605 Warren st. nw., in the novice group.

Mrs. E. L. Tolson, Glenwood rd., Bethesda, won first place in the artistic arrangement competition. A Kensington couple, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Lang, 22 Everett st., won first honors in canned fruits and vegetables.

Hand-painted and stenciled linen won first place in craft competition for Mrs. C. W. Page, 5512 Glenwood rd., Bethesda. There was a tie in the photography exhibit, with Ernest W. Schwartz, Baltimore, and Mrs. T. Y. Waite, 2020 Lanier dr., Silver Spring, as winners.

The trophy to the club with the best educational exhibit went to the Bethesda Garden Club.

Devaluation Won't Cut Prices Much

whiskies, the experts' advice is: Don't expect much, if anything, from the fact that the pound sterling is now officially worth only $2.80 instead of $4.03 in America.

This is based on the fact that the British have been sending to the United States about all the Scotch they had available for export. That means, it is explained, that the consumers' dollar-based demand, rather than the sellers' pound-based costs, have determined the price in this country.

Quick Drop Expected

For those who have been thinking how much they'd like to be able to afford a suit tailored from fine English woolens, the outlook is slightly brighter. But no quick, 30.5 percent cut in such items at retail here is even remotely in prospect as a result of devaluation.

The American importer will, for example, be able to get for $280, instead of $403, the same amount of woolen suiting for which the British exporter has been and will continue pricing at 100 pounds sterling.

But the American craftsmen who fit and put the suit together for the customer will be drawing the same dollar wages in the same quarters at the old rental and overhead costs. Those are the items that make up most of the price the consumer has to pay.

The $100 suit can't be expected to drop within nodding distance of a $89.50 price tag. The price cut will be based solely on the value of the material in the suit.

That gain for the American consumer—in the field of high-grade textiles—is likely, however, to be extended somewhat by increased competition confronting American producers. The pound devaluation is expected to provide a competitive inducement for importing British textiles, which domestic producers of comparable goods may have to meet by finding means of reducing their prices to some extent.

As for fine chinaware and pottery, the British likewise can increase their hopes of selling to Americans, but only if they find a way to increase their output of the types desired in this country.

They already have been shipping all they can for the American market. The same expectation holds—among the experts—for a number of specialty items, such as fine kid gloves and shoes, though pipe smokers with a yen for the imported treasures may look for noticeable price reductions in their particular luxury lines.

Christmas shoppers are warned by the experts not to mar their contemplated extravagances with hopes of economies as a result of the sterling and related devaluations. The import price declines for such items were virtually set by currency revaluations effected about six months ago by the occupation authorities in Germany and Japan, the chief exporters of goods of this kind.

For workers in American exporting industries, the experts believe the sterling devaluation will detract little or nothing from the security of their earnings. The impact in this field took effect when the British government decreed a 25 per cent reduction in its imports from the dollar areas.

Only exporters in nonbasic fields, whose markets depend on the availability of free dollars abroad, were exposed to that order, since basic exports—machinery and the like—are financed with Marshall Plan funds.

Workers whose livelihood depends on imports or the increased availability of certain raw materials can feel a greater security for their earnings as an immediate consequence of the sterling devaluations, the experts believe. But in such major fields as rubber and tin imports, the dollar value already has been determining the price, so little change is likely to be felt immediately.

Old, New Dollar Values by Nation

London, Sept. 18 (AP).—Here are the old and new dollar values for the newly devaluated currencies:

Britain	pound	$4.03	$2.80
South Africa	pound	4.03	2.80
Ireland	pound	4.03	2.80
New Zealand	pound	4.03	2.80
Australia	pound	3.22	2.24
Egypt	pound	4.183	2.871
Israel	pound	3.03*	2.80
India	rupee	.30225	.21
Denmark	kroner	.2084	.1448
Norway	kroner	.2015	.14

*Effective rate: $4.03 officially.

Stock Market to Do Business as Usual

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange will open as usual tomorrow. Closing of certain European exchanges is expected to have no effect on the trading hours of exchanges in the United States.

the lower rates will restrain this losing of reserves . . .'

Gutt remarked that the Fund countries making devaluations in their currencies would have to replenish their contributions to the Fund to make up for the gap.

The British action brought varied comments from American officials. Most expressed belief the action was imperative, but questioned its long-range value.

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder was the most optimistic.

"The British government has taken a constructive economic step in making the adjustment of their foreign exchange rates," he said, and added:

"The immediate effect should be an early rise in their dollar resources. The long-range results should be a healthy impetus to world-wide multilateral trade."

No Surprise to Fleming

Robert V. Fleming, president and chairman of the board of the Riggs National Bank, declared that the British pound devaluation came as no surprise to him.

He did say he did not expect the cut to be as deep as the 30½ percent decided upon. "I didn't think they would go that far," he commented.

The banker refused to comment on other aspects of the British action.

Senator George (D., Ga.), chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said:

"The effect of devaluation, while necessary and inevitable, will bring only temporary relief. The effect will be very short-lived. The only answer is reduction in production costs. Until they can produce at a lower-cost level, they can't recapture markets by devaluing their currency."

Senator Connally (D., Tex.), chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee:

"Devaluation of the pound will benefit the United Kingdom in its foreign trade and in its settlements with its dominions. This will be the immediate result, which may be relatively temporary. Even in the long run it will operate to her advantage."

'Step in Right Direction'

Chairman Maybank (D., S. C.) of the Senate Banking Committee:

"Devaluation of the pound won't solve all of Britain's problems, but it is a step in the right direction. The pound never has been worth its official exchange valuation. I have always felt it should have been devalued to its true commercial value in the international money markets of the world."

Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.), Senate Republican leader:

"My immediate reaction is that more than ever we should have kept the peril-point provision in the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act. There is bound to be a big influx of British goods into this country. Now we must do something to protect our own economy and assure fair competition in the United States."

(The peril-point provision would have required the Federal Tariff Commission to set a limit below which it thought the President should not go in making tariff agreements with other countries. If he did so, the President then would have had to explain his action to Congress. The Senate knocked this provision out of the Trade Agreements Act last week.)

"Should Be Very Helpful"

Senator Russell (D., Ga.), a member of the Appropriations Committee:

"This devaluation should be very helpful. It should do much to solve some of Britain's difficult problems. It is definitely a move in the right direction."

Senator Kem (R., Mo.):

"A significant step in the right direction. I hope the British government will follow this by two other equally important steps, namely a halt to the present costly experiments in Socialism and an end to its existing policy of making bilateral trade agreements.

"From my point of view, when these things are done, and only then, the British will be on the way to establish their economy on a sound and realistic basis."

The Noronic Disaster

The appalling loss of life resulting from the burning of the Noronic emphasizes the need for improved safety standards on vessels of this type. The origin of this devastating fire may never be known, but there is convincing evidence that the aged vessel lacked up-to-date equipment for preventing the spread of a blaze. Its wooden superstructure fed fuel to the flames, and liquor stored in a bar near the stateroom where the fire supposedly started made its contribution to the holocaust. Furthermore, the fact that the flames roared through the ship's corridors testifies to a lack of protecting fire doors that might have confined the blaze and would certainly have saved many lives.

It is a tribute to the vigilance of officers and crews that marine disasters to passenger vessels taking heavy toll of life have been comparatively few. However, those few have been horrible warnings of what can so easily happen if vessels as well as crews are not safe and seaworthy. So we hope that the investigation of the Noronic fire will go beyond a mere inquiry into causes and emphasize the importance of more and better safety devices that will provide insurance against future tragedies of the same sort.

Atlantic Defense System

The international defense mechanism which the North Atlantic Council set up on Saturday may appear somewhat bewildering to the citizen who gives only casual thought to security problems. It consists of numerous committees and regional planning bodies each with a specialized function. Only as this skeleton acquires flesh in the form of leaders and planners and implements in the form of military, naval and air units will it become generally understandable. That is still in the future. It appears to us, however, that the organization set up by the council has the possibility of devising a unified and adequate defense system for the North Atlantic community.

Over-all control of this defense mechanism is lodged in the North Atlantic Council, which is composed of the Foreign Ministers of the 12 participating countries. When and if emergency meetings of the council are necessary, however, the representatives of the powers in Washington will serve in place of the Foreign Ministers. We should like to have seen the council recognize its obligation of giving common direction to the foreign policies of the participating countries insofar as the basic issues of peace, war and national security are concerned. Its communique seems to leave the door open to the exercise of this function, but it stops short of spelling it out.

On the military side, the top control agency is the Defense Committee composed of Defense Ministers, which will be responsible to the council. The Defense Committee will in turn set up a Military Committee composed of the chiefs of staff of the various countries. The work of this committee will be largely concentrated in a more compact nucleus to be known as the "Standing Group," with representatives from only the United States, Great Britain and France. The Standing Group will be the spearhead of the common defense effort.

Responsibility for defense planning has been split up on a geographical basis. At first glance this may seem to have the effect of splintering the North Atlantic Treaty. But there is undoubtedly an advantage in having Denmark, Norway and Britain, for example, concentrate on defense planning for northern Europe. This regionalization also has the virtue of preserving the western European defense organization that has already developed an operational plan which assigns to each government specific functions in case of attack on any one of them. And it should encourage each of the Atlantic Treaty powers to put forth its maximum efforts in the common defense program.

Fortunately, the United States is to become an active participant in each of the regional groups. This is imperative to a proper functioning of our military aid program that is about to be approved by Congress. Under this arrangement, military aid by the United States can be conditioned upon the unification of defense systems in each region and upon tying the regional system tightly together. In the organizational chart this task of binding the regional defense plans together is assigned to the "Standing Group," but only the United States through MAP will have the power to compel unity where nationalistic officials still resist it.

The United States' acceptance of the chairmanship of both the council and the Defense Committee in their critical first year is also a favorable sign. We think that the organization set up on Saturday can be used to give the Atlantic community a single defense system if there is constant awareness among those who administer it of the goal to be attained. But the United States will have to be constantly vigilant if the degeneration of this agency into a mere device for the distribution of American arms is to be avoided.

Sterling Devalued

The financial statement given to the public concerning the terms of the dollar-sterling financial agreement certainly did not in itself warrant Sir Stafford Cripps' optimistic assertion that the accord would bring Britain's gold and dollar reserves into a manageable position. For with the exception of the United States' promise to stockpile more raw materials and the liberalization of the terms on which ERP dollars could be spent, the remedial measures were not calculated to provide immediate relief. Consequently there was good reason to believe that an understanding had been reached to devalue the pound sterling—a suspicion that was strengthened when officials of the Monetary Fund and the head of the World Bank came out in favor of currency devaluation.

The stage was, therefore, set for the announcement of yesterday that a new exchange value of $2.80 for the pound had been approved by the Monetary Fund, with comparable devaluation of the currencies of Australia, South Africa, India, Eire, Denmark and Norway. Sir Stafford Cripps also confessed that the decision to devalue the pound had been reached in advance of the Washington conference—a confession that explains the rather vague and unsatisfactory character of the terms of the Washington agreement.

Sir Stafford Cripps has heretofore been a bitter opponent of devaluation because he feared that the resultant increase in British exports would not bring in enough dollars to offset the loss of dollars resulting from the reduction in the sterling exchange rate. He also feared that devaluation would, by increasing the price to Britain of imports from the dollar area, raise British living costs and augment the pressure for wage increases. However, something had to be done—and done quickly—to provide Britain with more dollars before her present rapidly dwindling reserves were exhausted. The growing gravity of a crisis that threatened disaster, combined with assurances of our support and other promised aids, no doubt explains his change of front.

The British have not only devalued the pound but have made a really decisive cut that will sharply reduce the export prices of their goods in terms of dollars. Devaluation will also help to restore trade that has been suspended because potential buyers of British goods have been expecting that the pound would be devalued. The other deficit countries that have followed the British example will, of course, benefit in varying degrees, and for the same reasons, from the lowered exchange values of their currencies, and a further general realignment of currencies is to be expected, with a view to correcting trade imbalances without at the same time unduly demoralizing trade relationships.

In all cases devaluation will achieve its purpose only if it is viewed as an aid to restoration of more balanced trade—a step toward currency convertibility that will ultimately permit a return to multilateral trading. It is not a substitute for the often painful internal adjustments that are required to increase the productive capacity of deficit countries and enable them to earn more dollars by lowering overhigh production costs. The British government, for instance, will have to take a firm stand against demands for price and wage increases in order to retain the full benefits of devaluation. As it is only the cost of imports that will be directly affected, the increase in the overall domestic price level and in living costs will not be excessive; therefore demands for wage and salary increases can be successfully resisted by the government.

Since the government is already having great difficulty in maintaining its wage stabilization policy, devaluation gives rise to serious political as well as economic problems. Unless the public supports the efforts to expand exports, and is prepared to make some sacrifices to that end, devaluation will, as the Monetary Fund has warned, fail of its purpose. And that holds true not only for Great Britain, but all the other countries that are relying on devaluation to increase their export outlets in dollar markets.

Civil Rule For Guam

Under the terms of the Treaty of Paris, signed in 1898, by which the Philippines, Puerto Rico and Guam were acquired from Spain, this country was obligated to "fix the civil rights and political status" of the inhabitants of the islands. The obligation has been fulfilled with great credit in respect of the first two dependencies; it has been virtually ignored in the case of Guam, which has been under Navy rule for more than half a century.

It would not be accurate to say that the people of Guam are politically as degraded and subjugated as, say, the people of the District of Columbia. They have an elected legislature. Its bills cannot, however, become law without the consent of the Secretary of the Navy. The naval Governor appoints judges and may reverse their decisions. The Guamanians have no access to Federal courts and no legal guarantee of civil rights. Unlike Washingtonians, they are not even called citizens of the United States; they are mere "nationals."

In 1947, the State, War, Navy and Interior Departments joined in recommending that Congress enact organic legislation for Guam and that the island be put under civilian supervision as soon as practicable. Congress has not yet responded. But the President early this month named Carlton Skinner of the Interior Department as Governor of the island and ordered transfer of administrative responsibility to the Secretary of the Interior, effective July 1, 1950. It is entirely within his executive authority to do this; however, replacement of the approximately 200 naval personnel now administering the island government with civilian administrators requires a congressional appropriation, and this the Senate Apprppriations Committee has declined to recommend.

Senator Thomas of the committee said it would be cheaper to let the Navy continue running the island, and Senator Cordon said he saw no urgency about the transfer. It seems to us that both are mistaken. The island can be administered more efficiently and more economically by civilians. But what is much more important, the transfer to civilian rule is looked upon as a test of American good faith in dealing with dependencies. Continued military rule of Guam is used effectively in propaganda against the United States. It is, in principle, an indefensible form of rule. Indeed, the enactment of an organic law enabling the people of Guam "to develop self-government" is an obligation imposed upon us by the United Nations Charter.

Shameful Episode

Chief Judge Denman of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit has written a chapter in the history of the United States' wartime dealings with its citizens of Japanese origin that every American ought to read. It comes in the form of an opinion upholding the judgment of a lower Federal court that renunciations of citizenship on the part of the incarcerated Nisei are null and void. That decision was anticipated. It is difficult to see how any representative of the Government could have asked the court to accept as valid renunciations of citizenship obtained from loyal men and women who had been imprisoned as enemies and were under threats of death if they took any other course. The significance of Judge Denman's opinion is its candid recital of the facts regarding this shameful episode.

In the hysteria that followed the attack on Pearl Harbor, Major General De Witt ordered "scores of thousands of loyal Americans" into "barbed wire guarded stockades." The unneccessary cruelty of the order is indicated by the provision that each family could take with it only the bedding, clothing and household utensils that the members of the family (including widows with small children) could carry. Some 18,000 persons were packed into one-story shacks, with no inside plumbing, crowded into a 1¼ square miles of space at Tule Lake. Here they lived through the war years under clouds of smoke in winter and of dust in summer and under the dead monotony and demoralizing atmosphere of a concentration camp.

"No Federal penitentiary so treats its adult prisoners," comments Judge Denman. "Here were the children and babies as well." Some of the Nisei men helped to build the shacks in which they were to live, and "to drive it in to their already shocked spirits that their treatment was to be like criminals," as the judge says, "they were paid the prison wage of $12.00 a month to the unskilled and $16.00 to those skilled, while their free fellow citizens, working beside them, were paid the prevailing $12.00 to $20.00 per day of their respective trades."

Beyond the hardships endured was the painful realization of General De Witt's philosophy that inspired the evacuation. "It makes no difference," the general had said, "whether he is an American citizen or not he is still a Japanese . . . The Japanese race is an enemy race." He ordered the evacuation in spite of the fact that none of the victims had committed any act of sabotage. With such unenlightened militarism in the saddle and with pro-Japanese organizations in the camp threatening those who wished to retain their citizenship, it is certainly not surprising that there were many renunciations. The shameful aspect of the case is that the Government put such a low value upon citizenship, and especially that the initial steps in this unprincipled spree on the part of the military received the sanction of the Supreme Court.

Highway Hazards

The recent fire in the Holland Tunnel caused by ignition of carbon disulfide did not kill anyone, but it was only a happy chance that prevented a major disaster and loss of many lives. As it was, the property damage was serious and transportation was badly balled up. The National Board of Fire Underwriters cites this particular fire as an example of the hazards of highway transportation of dangerous materials and says it is a "grave warning against flagrant violations of safety rules and lack of suitable provisions for enforcement of current regulations." Its recommendations—for safer routing of explosives, better facilities for protection from fire damage, stiffer penalties for violation of safety regulations, and an educational program to insure better cooperation in law observance from shippers, trucking firms and drivers—deserve wide publicity. For the very moderation of the program is evidence of an almost criminal disregard of safety standards. Unless the public is aroused to the point of demanding remedial action, there will certainly be other major disasters, that will exact heavy toll of life as well as destruction of property.

"Well, What's New?"

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

Whose Foreign Policy?

A VITALLY IMPORTANT question must now be answered. Who is to control American foreign policy? The obvious answer is, Dean G. Acheson and his State Department. Yet this is not necessarily the correct answer. For in the last few weeks John Snyder and his Treasury Department have assumed the central responsibility for dealing with the British crisis. And the American relationship with Britain is in turn at the very heart of American foreign policy.

Moreover, this question of the control of foreign policy will not be posed in acute form. For although the economic talks have ended, the British crisis has not. This fact has been recognized in a highly important decision which has not been reported in any detail. This decision is to create a continuing committee whose task it will be to find ways to place the Anglo-American partnership on a new and lasting basis.

The members of this committee are to be Acheson, Snyder, ECA Chief Paul Hoffman, British Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks, and Canadian Ambassador Hume Wrong. These men will, of course, be too busy to meet more than occasionally. They will accordingly appoint deputies who will do the real spadework. The top committee will have an American chairman, and his deputy will chair the working committee.

Thus, if Snyder is appointed chairman of the new committee, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury William McChesney Martin will be chairman of the working group. Snyder and Martin will then be the chief spokesmen of the United States in the long, delicate, crucial negotiations which will ensue.

This will mean simply that the Treasury Department will have the main responsibility for dealing with the central problem of American foreign policy.

THE QUESTION of the chairmanship is still unsettled. So is a second, related, and equally vital question. This is whether the Anglo-American-Canadian project is to be a serious, full-time effort, with its own secretariat, and with the deputies assigned to this task and to nothing else. This in itself would mean that the strategic partnership, which finds expression in the existing Combined Chiefs of Staff, had been extended to the political and economic fields.

This is what the British, and the most far-seeing of the State Department and ECA experts, want. But the history of the economic talks which have now ended suggests that the more probable outcome is one of those futile, spare-time committee setups with which Washington abounds. Before the talks started, a "position paper," for which the State Department and ECA were chiefly responsible, was approved by President Truman. This paper envisaged a secret conference of the chief negotiators, in which an attempt would be made really to come to grips with the basic causes of the crisis.

Those matters which were on the taboo list in the larger formal meetings, including devaluation of the pound, were to be frankly canvassed by the chiefs of the three delegations. The secret talk never came off. The pound has now been devalued—devaluation on September 18 was forecast a week ago in this space. Nevertheless the fact remains, that under Snyder's chairmanship, the basic issues were skirted.

This does not mean that Snyder took a wholly negative attitude, or that the economic conference was a failure. Indeed, the British experts and civil servants were pleasantly surprised that so much was accomplished. They had expected only criticism and gratuitous advice, and the British Cabinet had actually considered calling off the conference on the grounds that it would only make matters worse.

THE BRITISH were thus gratified to find Snyder reasonable and the other American participants anxious to help. Hoffman particularly was admirably courageous in agreeing to offshore buying of Canadian wheat, although he knew that the congressional isolationists would scream blue murder. President Truman and Agriculture Secretary Charles Brannan reserve equal credit for backing up Hoffman.

Yet marginal measures like the wheat agreement will obviously not be enough. The American experts who really know the scope of the crisis do not share the gratification of the surprised British. They see the dwindling British dollar reserve, all that stands between Britain and bankruptcy, continuing to leak out at a rate which every three months cancels out the entire British dollar income for a year. In these circumstances bold, joint action is essential and the continuing committee is the only instrument for devising such action.

That is why those who know what British collapse would mean to the United States fear that the Treasury will retain the chief responsibility for dealing with the British crisis. For there is something in the very nature of the Treasury which generates a timid caution in its officials. And there has never been a time when caution and timidity were less in the interests of the United States.

Crommelin's Charges

It is about time that private citizens who know something about military, naval and air forces should speak up. The Air Force is a valuable arm but it has persistently exaggerated its importance in the most tremendous propaganda campaign that the services have ever seen.

The Air Force consistently urges the exclusive value of strategic bombing which, as proved by the last war, is most expensive and at the same time gives the least returns for the money expended. Moreover, the emphasis upon long-range bombers means that the urgently necessary umbrella of fighting planes for troops in the field is relegated to a secondary role; whereas it is, of course, the most valuable work of an air force.

Advocacy of fixed land bases to the exclusion of floating bases for aircraft in England and the Near East lays these tremendously expensive installations open to bombing attack or, in case another nation gets the atom bomb, to complete obliteration.

On the other hand carrier-based aircraft, both bombers and fighters, can be and have been, as proved in the last war, of inestimable value over every ocean and the shores thereof. Also a carrier is protected by destroyers, antiaircraft cruisers, etc. to an extent not possible by fixed defenses in land bases. Moreover, no matter how large the carrier, it and its escorts are merely specks on the sea, and are very difficult to locate. Moreover, the carrier and its escorting defense have a mobility which enables them to escape plane attacks to an extent that is utterly impossible in the case of fixed bases.

Captain Crommelin's courageous and self-sacrificing protest against cutting down the Navy and destroying its morale is completely right and should be backed up by Congress and every patriotic citizen.

Catholic Schools

Theodore L. Humes (letter published September 12) argues that public funds should be given to church schools in compensation for the "staggering free-will contribution on the part of Catholics to the public treasury" by providing their own educational system. His position contradicts Cardinal Spellman's latest pronouncement of the church's own policy: "Under the Constitution we do not ask nor do we expect public funds to pay for the construction of parochial school buildings or for the support of teachers, or for other maintenance costs."

This has been the attitude of the church in recent months in claiming only so-called "auxiliary services" for parochial schools at Government expense. It conflicts, however, with other official published statements of Catholic policy which take Mr. Humes' position, and it conflicts also with the practice of the church in the past. For years, in fact, Catholic schools in 20 districts of New Mexico have been supported totally by universal taxation, and there are other instances of the church accepting rental from public funds for its school buildings.

In writing of the "free-will contribution" Catholics are making "to the public treasury" by maintaining their own schools, Mr. Humes is using the familiar argument of "double taxation" and distorts simple truth. Catholics pay to send their children to church schools because they want their own religion integrated in the curriculum. They are getting private-school service and paying extra, one way or another, for private tuition.

Now, suppose the Catholic schools were to close and unload nearly 2,800,000 children on the public school system. As Mr. Humes notes, "Catholic children would still have the right to an education provided at Government expense," and, as everyone knows, facilities would have to be set up. What is to be inferred from this profound observation? Is it implied that the public school system should keep empty school buildings and a stand-by staff of teachers against this possibility? Catholic taxpayers would object no less than others, and anyway, as Mr. Humes says, the situation is ridiculous and impossible. Why, then, discuss it?

Marines Recognized

As an active member of the Fleet Reserve Association, I wish to refute a statement made in The Washington Post relative to an action that took place at our convention at Annapolis. You stated:

"The Fleet Reserve Association of the United States has finally recognized the Marine Corps . . ."

Our original preamble, which has been in effect since the inception of the Fleet Reserve Association some 25 years ago, contained two references to the Marine Corps. It was the unanimous opinion of delegates assembled at Annapolis that the inclusion of a third reference would add to the already great prestige of the Marine Corps, giving it full recognition and equality with the Navy.

Road "Suicides"

There are those who would criticize and condemn you for publishing accident pictures of wrecked cars and strewn bodies (such as the one on River rd. in the issue of September 12). However, a more vivid and shocking picture must be presented to the public, and to parents, who give their children high-powered convertibles to go out not only to kill themselves doing 90 miles an hour but to perhaps kill or maim others in the process.

Please keep showing us the bitter and uncalled for highway "murders" in your columns until Federal uniform safety and speed laws, brought about by public opinion, prevail. Teen-agers taught sensible, safe driving habits in our District schools will be the drivers of tomorrow who will be in a better position to stop "road suicides."

Temporary Employes

When his business failed in the depression my husband went to work as a temporary civil service employe. Now, almost 15 years later, he is still temporary. He went in the Army in 1942 for six years and was overseas two of them.

He is 61 and I am 60 and we have no security at all. We have saved a little while bringing up a family, but not enough to live on. My husband is really ill with worry about our future.

We are hoping the President will soon sign the bill blanketing the temporary employes into civil service and that it will apply to us. WORRIED.

British Gambling

Matters of commerce in Britain are delayed through betting cliques monopolizing telephones or in queues at postoffices dispatching money orders or telegrams. Also, workers and civil servants keep leaving places of employment for racing results published every 15 minutes.

Please help us get laws in this country for 1 hour in mornings only and 1 hour in afternoon only for betting, phone calls or dispatch of betting money orders and telegrams. Also for newspapers to publish racing results in last editions of evening newspapers only.

"Devaluation"

Your September 15 editorial, "Devaluation," concludes: "If introduced under favorable conditions by governments willing and able to insist on domestic reforms that will prevent further inflation, devaluation of currencies will assist the return to balanced trade and help lay the foundation of sound, permanently stabilized currencies." This is like saying that 'if your apartment is cold, if you insist on the janitor lighting the furnace, then changing the numbers on the thermometer so that 60 degrees reads 70 degrees, will assist in the return of warmth, etc."

Devaluation cannot possibly "assist the return of balanced trade" because when you devalue the pound sterling you automatically enhance relatively every other currency. This makes it easier for Britain to sell, but more difficult for Britain to buy. And where Britain must buy raw materials in nonsterling areas her costs of production go up.

The "domestic reforms" in Great Britain which will lower her comparative costs of production are not to be accomplished by waving a wand. They involve a reversal of present trends toward the 'welfare state"; introduction of modern mass productive techniques; standardization in industry; return of competitive conditions which are impossible under government ownership of industry; in other words, a revolution in industry which Britain seems both unwilling and unable to attempt.

Before the war Britain was able to afford the dole because of the invisible imports from foreign investments. These have now disappeared and Britain is trying to have her cake of "socialism" and eat it at the same time. The palpably inadequate palliatives suggested by the financial discussions fool no one, least of all the American Congress or the British voters—both of whom must inevitably face the facts of life eventually.

Virginia Beer

I read with astonishment a news article in your issue of September 14 in which it is stated that the once grand old Commonwealth of Virginia maintains a gang of snoopers to spy upon its residents and check the license plates of cars, whose owners are suspected of purchasing liquor or beer in the District for transportation to their Virginia homes.

The snoopers will spot the citizen's car and will radio ahead to some official, so that a warrant can be sworn out for the search of the car while in transit in Virginia. A warrant cannot be legally based on such procedure. This search, mind you, is not to vindicate the majesty of the law, but to protect a few buzzards who are preying upon the residents of Virginia in their outrageous charges for beer and kindred beverages and to protect Virginia's profits in the liquor business.

It is a matter of deep concern that high officials of the State, an Assistant Attorney General and the chief of the ABC Board, lend their sanction to the issuance of search warrants on a telephone or radio call from a snooper. J. V. S.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Intervention In China

Lippmann

MANY a bystander in the dispute about military aid to China must have asked himself what those for whom Senator Knowland of California is the leading spokesman wish to do. The best available answer to that question is to be found, we may assume, in the plan outlined by General Chennault to the Committee on Armed Services, and then printed in the Congressional Record by Senator Knowland (May 3, 1949). Moreover, the Chennault proposal has recently been supported, not in all its details but in its general conception, by Vice Admiral Oscar Badger, who has just returned to Washington after a distinguished tour of duty as Commander, Naval Forces Western Pacific.

So anyone who is trying to make up his mind about the next phase of U. S. policy in China may well begin by examining the Chennault plan.

THE CHENNAULT plan calls for the use of American arms, money, and some personnel in order to reinforce about eight Chinese armies which are, or at least were last May, resisting or still unconquered by the Communist army. These eight armies are to be found in western and southern China. They are ranged in a semicircle around the great central region of China which has been overrun by the Communists.

General Chennault believes that by supplying these armies, in addition of course to supporting Chiang's blockade of the China coast, the Communists can be contained, and also so seriously harassed by a prolonged civil war that they will not be able to consolidate their power. His plan is to encircle Communist China on the west, the south, and on the east from the sea—leaving only the long northern frontier with the Soviet Union open.

There are two puzzling features of this plan. One is its logistics—that is to say how in a country where the enemy forces control all the seaports, American arms and supplies are to be carried to these armies. The other and even stranger, feature of the Chennault plan is that it is so ridiculously inexpensive.

AT LEAST seven out of the eight armies have no seaport, and the only one which may have a seaport on the island of Hainan is virtually no army. None has an accessible friendly land frontier. It would appear then that if they are to be supplied, it will have to be by American airlifts. Now the most distant of General Chennault's armies is in Ningsia Province, some 1500 miles by air from either Japan or Formosa, the nearest places on which a firm and dependable base can be set up for an airlift. The nearest of General Chennault's armies is in Kwangsi Province—some 800 air miles from Formosa, about a thousand miles from the Philippines.

There is no air corridor, as there was to Berlin, through Communist territory to any of these places. Supplies would have to be flown, in some cases for as much as 1000 miles over country held by the very armies against which the arms were to be used. It is about 250 miles from Frankfurt to Berlin, and to supply three-quarters of one city, the greater part of our military air transport was needed. Yet we are supposed to support seven or eight Chinese armies deep inside Asia.

EVEN MORE puzzling is the Chennault estimate of the cost of supplying these eight military campaigns. This is what the general told the Armed Services Committee: "I will not try to offer details in public testimony, but I have thought through details of a plan, and I have honestly calculated, from the military side alone, that competent men in the defense establishment with Asiatic and air experience could work out adequate defense plans for the next couple of years at a cost per year not exceeding the Berlin airlift."

Now the Berlin airlift is supposed to have cost about 87 million dollars, not including the cost of the supplies carried in by air. The authorization for China in the military aid bill, which has satisfied Senator Knowland, is 75 million dollars, and I have been told by an eminent supporter of the plan that the 75 million dollars is enough.

I CANNOT believe that anyone seriously believes that eight military campaigns against an army which has defeated Chiang's Nationalist army can be sustained for 75 million dollars a year. It costs many times that much to support one Greek army in what is, as compared with the immense Chinese civil war, a small operation. The offer to contain communism in Asia for 75 million dollars a year sounds a lot like the man who had the bright idea of selling the Brooklyn Bridge to widows and orphans for a down payment of $2.75. That cheap price for what is advertised as necessary to the salvation of Asia and the world is open to the gravest suspicion. Can it be, among those who know what they are doing, anything but a scheme to get this country so entangled in the Chinese civil war that, once entangled, it cannot refuse to pay the real costs in money and perhaps even in blood?

ANYONE who is tempted to commit the United States to this intervention will do well to pause, and to take time out to study what happened 30 years ago when the British, the French, the Japanese, and to some extent the Americans also, intervened in the Russian civil war. They too hoped to contain and suppress communism by supplying arms, money, and even troops to anti-Communist generals on the periphery of the vast Russian land mass. The Allies then had picked Alexeyev, Kornilov, Kolchak, Denikin and Wrangel, as General Chennault has now picked Ma Hung-kwei, Kuo Chi-Chao, Ma Pu-fang, Pei Chung-hsi and Chen Chi-tung. According to Mr. Churchill, the Allies contributed the equivalent, not of 75 million dollars but of well over 500 million, and in addition they supplied their own troops.

The intervention in the Russian civil war failed disastrously in a short time. Yet in those days the intervention was backed by several strong military powers, while the Russian Communists, unlike the Chinese Communists today, had no military power which could or would help them.

ALMOST certainly the great consequence of that misguided policy was that in the struggle against the anti-Communist armies and their foreign supporters, the Red army was created, and the Russian revolution was militarized. That is, I believe, the most likely outcome of the Chennault policy of promoting and sustaining — with measures just enough to keep it going and not enough to conclude it—the Chinese civil war. In that struggle the Chinese Communists will be relieved of the burden of feeding and maintaining a civilian economy, and they will become instead a military power.

For nothing is so likely to forge a powerful and fanatical military instrument as a prolonged struggle, which they would probably win, against Chinese reactionaries and foreign interventionists. That would provide them with just the incentive, the stimulus, the pretext, the pressure, the discipline, and the necessity for making the Chinese Communist state a powerful military state in close alliance with the Soviet Union. Then the very thing we most fear today, and the very thing which Senator Knowland so sincerely hopes to avert, will happen: the balance of military power in Asia will be in fact, not merely in theory, turned decisively in favor of communism.

Senate Awaits House Action On Fund Bills

By The Associated Press

Senate leaders waited impatiently yesterday for House members to return from a month's vacation so they can get together and tackle a pile-up of almost 18 billion dollars worth of money bills.

It's one of the major tasks ahead of the lawmakers as they begin their final drive for adjournment at an uncertain date.

The appropriations should have been cleaned up before July 1 when the fiscal year began. But the slow-moving Senate just wasn't able to get along with its work as quickly as the House. Agencies awaiting the funds are operating on emergency spending authority until October 1.

House Due Back Wednesday

The House members are due back Wednesday from the vacation which the Senate refused to approve.

Both the Senate and House have voted on the appropriations. But their knotty differences remain to be untangled in conference.

Major bills tied up cover spending for the military establishment, foreign aid and the Interior Department.

Chairman McKellar (D-Tenn), of the Senate Appropriations Committee said he will try to get conferences under way again as soon as possible.

"I hope we can work out our differences without too much delay," McKellar said. Then he added: "But that's only a hope."

Fight Over Wheat Impends

In another direction, new complications were piling up for the lawmakers: These were the demands by some Senators that the Economic Cooperative Administration deny Britain the right to spend 175 billion dollars of recovery funds for Canadian wheat.

Senators Butler (R., Nebr.) and Young (R., N. Dak.) are leading a fight to block this permission given by ECA, designed to ease some of Britain's dollar troubles.

The House will return to find the Senate deep in debate on the foreign arms aid program. This measure, setting up a program of arming friendly nations to discourage any Russian aggression, comes up Monday.

Olds' FPC Confirmation Held Doubtful

By The Associated Press

Fresh appointment troubles appeared to be piling up for President Truman yesterday in advance of a Senate vote today on the nomination of John Carson to be a Federal Trade Commissioner.

With the outcome of the Carson confirmation fight in doubt, an informal check indicated that the Senate Commerce Committee might turn thumbs down on Mr. Truman's reappointment of Leland Olds as a Federal Power Commissioner.

Olds' nomination last June 8 for a new five-year term is being opposed by those who disagree with his espousal of public power proposals in the 10 years he has served as a commissioner.

Five years ago former Senator Moore, Oklahoma Republican, led the fight against Olds. Olds was confirmed then by a voice vote only after his appointment had been held up nearly four months.

The opposition to Olds now looks formidable. One Democratic Senator in a position to know said some of Olds' friends might be willing to settle for an adverse report by the committee on the nomination to get it to the Senate floor. The nominee's chances may be better there than in the committee.

Although he would not comment, Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) was reported urging the Commerce Committee to act one way or the other and not to bottle the nomination up, as the Armed Services Committee did the appointment of former Gov. Mon C. Wallgren of Washington to head the National Security Resources Board.

Any failure of the committee to act would be almost certain to bring a recess appointment for Olds after Congress quits.

Barter Plan for Surplus Foods Viewed by CCC, U. N. Agency

By Robert S. Allen

A domestic and a United Nations agency have potentially highly important good news for United States farmers worried about accumulating crop surpluses.

The domestic agency is the Agriculture Department's Commodity Credit Corporation. The U. N. agency is the Food and Agricultural Organization. Both have ambitious plans that may go a long way toward the simultaneous solution of three pressing problems.

These are absorbing the big American farm surpluses, getting this food to countries sorely in need of it, and overcoming a number of currency complexities plaguing the world.

Both far reaching plans are interrelated, although not dependent on one another. Also, they are still in a formative stage. Numerous problems still have to be worked out. But the all-important thing is that the plans have been blueprinted, able and conscientious experts are pressing them, and the will exists in high United States and U. N. quarters to put them into operation.

The CCC plan hinges on a little-known provision written into the law recently passed by Congress extending the life of the agency.

Under this clause, the CCC is empowered to barter farm surpluses for strategic war materials from foreign countries.

Nominally, the extent of this bartering is limited by a requirement entailing Munitions Board approval. The board has charge of stockpiling strategic materials, with a 600-million-dollar appropriation for this year. CCC authorities think they have found a loophole in the law that will greatly extend their bartering range.

This potential loophole centers around CCC's purchase and storage of large quantities of highly perishable farm surpluses, such as powdered eggs, milk, potatoes, etc. There is great foreign demand for these commodities, on which CCC has consistently taken a loss. The plan of the agency is to arrange barter deals for these product and to store the strategic materials in its emptied warehouses until the Munitions Board can take over the supplies.

That will obviate the necessity of obtaining Munitions Board approval and make possible disposal of billions of dollars of excess farm commodities abroad.

Thomas Rawlings, head of the CCC's Foreign Supply Branch, is working on still a further extension of the barter program.

This calls for swapping deals on a multilateral basis.

Example: The U. S. would swap wheat for Brazilian rice, which in turn would be swapped with India for mica. Thus the three countries would get rid of surpluses they don't need in return for commodities they do need—all without the exchange of dollars.

One big obstacle in this plan is the exclusion of a number of highly desirable strategic materials, such as tin, rubber, jute and manganese. Countries with these materials can readily sell them for dollars. However, there are other items on the national stockpiling list for which barter can be arranger. These are copper, zinc, shellac, titanium, castor oil, quartz crystals. CCC will concentrate on them.

The plan of the U. N.'s Food and Agricultural Organization calls for establishment of a new agency.

It will be known as the International Commodity Clearing House, with a five-billion-dollar revolving fund. This huge sum will be obtained through sale of stock to member nations on a prorata basis.

This fund will be used to purchase food supplies from the subscribing countries above and beyond their so-called "normal" exportable surpluses. ICCH will act as "broker" with payments being made in the currency of the selling countries. The system will work this way:

The United States has a wheat stock greatly in excess of its "normal" exportable surplus. India needs wheat. ICCH would sell this wheat for rupees. These rupees would be put to the credit of the United States. At the same time, or a later date, the United States buys from India. These dollars would be credited to India and ICCH, acting as the clearing house, would settle with the two countries in their own country—dollars to the United States and rupees to India.

The draft of this FAO plan goes to member nations this week for study, in preparation for the agency's meeting in Washington in November.

Vaughan Hit By Capehart

Alexandria, Ind., Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Senator Capehart (R., Ind.) said today that President Truman would dismiss Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, his military aide, if he followed the same code of ethics he held as a Senator.

In a speech prepared for delivery at a Madison County Republican picnic, Capehart said Mr. Truman in 1941 had indorsed a Washington Post editorial denouncing Thomas G. Corcoran, an administrative assistant to the late President Roosevelt.

Capehart said the editorial complained that Corcoran used his White House influence "in the same manner in which General Vaughan is accused of selling his."

Army Casts Veil of Mystery Over Suppression of Nazi War Film in U. S.

film. And why the movie is being released now in a rough, incomplete form.

Today, however, three years after the film was first started, Army officers finally have these replies to queries about the Nuernberg films:

They say the Department definitely has decided against leasing the film for showing through normal exhibition channels in American movie houses. For many, many months this point was up in the air.

Further, they state that 16-millimeter prints of the present rough movie will be made and stocked in Signal Corps libraries, available only for free showings in schools, churches, clubs, etc.

Various reasons have been given privately to movie men for these decisions—which in their eyes amount to suppression. Army officials have said that the film—entitled "Nuernberg—Its Lesson for Today"—is "outdated," "professionally poor," "dull and uninteresting" and contains "too much horror."

Such opinions either conflict directly with those of the New York critics who were shown the rough film, or involve points which were scheduled to be removed in the final processing.

Movie men, therefore, believe there are other reasons for the Army's stand on the entire matter. They are asking further questions which raise problems more fundamental than the movie itself.

Army officials, incidentally, object to statements that they have "suppressed" the movie. Technically—but only technically—they are right. It has been shown freely in Germany and one 35-millimeter rough print is available at the Pentagon. The latter has been screened privately for small groups of editors, lawyers and movie men in various cities. And once the 16-millimeter film is stocked in Signal Corps libraries, it will be available for showing to bar associations, church groups and school children—in its present form.

Different Thing

But it is clear that this limited, "amateur," distribution of an unfinished product is a far different thing than a public release of a completed, professional film and billing at established theaters.

Furthermore, an Army spokesman disclosed yesterday that issuance of the 16-millimeter Signal Corps film will have an important effect on any future effort to tell the "Nazi story" through Government documentary footage!

Until a Signal Corps release is made, it was said, anyone has free access to all Government film on the subject and can make any moving picture he wants from this source. Thus a producer could have gone to the Army files at Astoria, N. Y., and bought all the footage and sound used in the Nuernberg film. It would have cost him more to turn out a movie this way than by leasing the present Government production and improving it, but it could be done.

Now the film used in the latter—the cream of the trials and captured Nazi footage—is only available to movie producers at the discretion of the Department of the Army.

Movie men immediately suggested that the Army decision to issue the unfinished Nuernberg movie was more an effort to keep control of the film than to make it available to the public.

"It's an evasion and a subterfuge," said William B. Shirer, foreign correspondent and commentator, "By all means this great film should be finished and widely shown instead of buried in a 16-millimeter Signal Corps subject."

High Praise

Shirer was one of the score of critics, editors and writers who were shown the film last winter and praised it highly. He described the Army's record of opposition to showing the film as a "scandal" and declared that he hoped the "whole, stinking story will be blasted out."

The case history of the Nuernberg trial film is a long one. In 1946, Gen. Lucius Clay proposed to the Allied Control Commission in Berlin that the four powers pool all films of the International Tribunal and captured German footage and make a full-length documentary. This was agreed to, and the United States accepted the job for all.

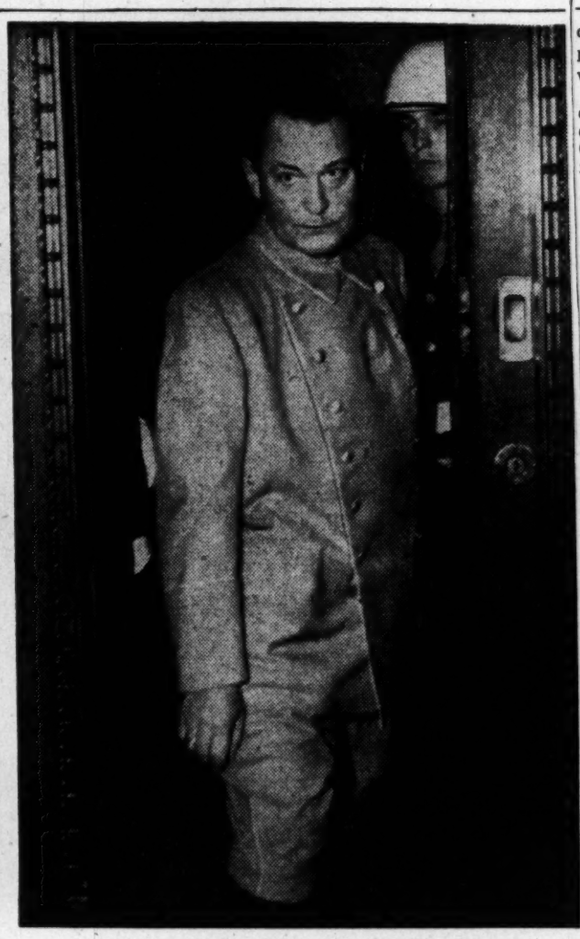

But no qualified picture men were available in Germany and so the War Department's Civil Affairs Division was handed the ball. Pare Lorentz, who made such famed documentaries as "The Plow That Broke the Plains" and "The River," was chief of films, theater and music for that office and took over the task.

Millions of feet of trial film and captured Nazi footage were examined. A script was prepared, liberally employing the latter. For the first time in history, a victor had photographic proof of the crimes and triumphs of his vanquished enemy, vaingloriously made on the spot by his own cameramen.

There were shots of Hitler declaring he had no territorial ambitions in Czechoslovakia—and his armed entry of that country. Lidice, the burning of the Warsaw ghetto, and the bombing of Rotterdam all were there in full detail. And one priceless shot of Goering personally stealing pigs, "requisitioned" from a farmer.

HUNDREDS OF SLAVE LABORERS WERE STARVED TO DEATH AS IN THIS CAMP AT NORDHAUSEN, GERMANY

GOERING LEAVING JAIL ELEVATOR

The script was approved by the War Department, and Secretary Robert P. Patterson directed Clay to make the movie following its directions. It was stipulated, however, that the completed picture must be approved by the Department before release. In May, 1947, a small crew began work in Germany.

It was fall before a "rough-cut assembly" was finished and back in Washington. There a group of officials, including Associate Justice Robert Jackson of the Supreme Court of the United States, reviewed the film. Jackson had been American chief prosecutor at the Nuernberg trials and it was suggested that he prepare a foreword for the completed movie. Meanwhile, Colonel Lorentz had resigned his Government post—in May, 1947—and Brig. Gen. R. A. McClure was named to succeed him.

After the Washington showing, revisions and corrections were recommended and sent to Berlin. Then for nearly a year, apparently nothing was done. The long delay has never been explained satisfactorily——like others to follow. But it is known that strong forces in the Army opposed the entire war crimes program from the beginning—or at least after it was decided to try German army chiefs and general staff members.

Army Secretary Kenneth Royall and Undersecretary Draper were said to be in this camp and clearly were in favor of rebuilding Germany as a bulwark against communism. Too quickly and with too little regard for a resurgence of Nazism, some said.

In the fall of 1948, however, it was decided to have a trial showing of an 80-minute film—entitled "Nurenberg—Its Lesson For Today" at a theater in Stuttgart. It was an instant hit.

"The film," said a recent issue of the Information Bulletin, official publication of the United States Military Government in Germany, "has been a resounding success, whether it played a big city, five-show-a-day movie palace or a camp-chair country theater . . .

"Critically, too, its reception was unexpectedly good. Newspaper everywhere . . . urged their readers to hurry to the next performance . . . Audiences sat through the picture in stunned silence and then filed out, wordless and disturbed . . .

"According to one ISD (Information Services Division, OMGUS) official in Wuerttemberg-Baden, 'this film tells the Germans more about Nazism in 80 minutes than we've been able to tell them in three years.' "

This was in Germany. A rough English version, meanwhile, apparently was being held under wraps at the Pentagon.

Showing Arranged

Justice Jackson, who had been asked to review and submit criticism of the original rough draft, first learned of the arrival of the so-called finished product from sources outside the Army. A showing then was arranged at his request. Jackson wasn't satisfied with this version either, though he strongly favored completion of the project.

What he didn't know then—and what apparently few know today—is that few if any of the changes recommended by Jackson, General McClure and others in authority in Washington in the fall of 1947 ever were incorporated in the film shown in Germany and shipped back to the Pentagon a year later.

An Army spokesman, Col. George E. Eyster, made this disclosure yesterday. He said he didn't know why the changes ordered by the War Department never were made nor why the film was released in an unfinished state.

"Someone decided to try it on the Germans as it was," said Eyster. "And sent us a print."

Shortly afterward, some New York writers and critics who had heard of the success of the German production made inquiries about the film. A group of 20 to 25 were invited to see it last winter. Among them were Shirer, John Gunther, Dorothy Thompson, Whitney Burnett, Geoffrey Parsons, Joseph Barnes, Joseph Phillips, Walter Millis, Hamilton Fish Armstrong, Ted Thackery, Jay Cooke Allen and Raymond Swing. One or two incidents of interest occurred at this showing.

Before the screening started, one of the Army officers present gave a brief talk stating that the picture was pretty "dull." And two of the guests, who had been present at a prior screening, reported afterward that what was shown was even poorer than the original. It had been cut in spots, they said, and evidently had not been cleaned beforehand—a routine procedure.

Nevertheless, the authors and critics present disagreed emphatically with the Army view that the film was "dull."

"I liked the picture tremendously," says Gunther, author of "Inside U. S. A." "Inside Europe" etc. And I think it ought to be shown in every city, town and hamlet in the country. The Army's decision not to release it for a general showing is monstrous and shocking.

"Aside from one fellow, all 25 of us there were very strongly of the same opinion—that the picture was magnificent and should be shown."

Burnett Comments

Said Whit Burnett, author and publisher of the Story Press:

"The film is terrific and a masterpiece. There are technical defects, probably due to the bad print shown us, but this is a documentary of such great historical value that it should be shown to everyone and let the people judge for themselves whether they like it or not."

Shirer agreed with Gunther that the sentiment of the group was all but unanimous, that the film was a good one and should be shown. He said Joseph Phillips, now an editor of Newsweek and during the war a colonel on General Eisenhower's staff, wrote a letter to the Department of the Army, favoring its release.

The writers asked one of the Army officers present why the film had taken so long to complete, noting that the Russians had had a somewhat similar film—plentifully peppered with Communist propaganda—in New York movie houses a year earlier.

His explanation—that "dictatorships always do things quicker than democracies"—met a large number of raised eyebrows.

Justice Jackson publicly raised the same question earlier. The Bar Association of the City of New York wanted a showing of the Nuernberg trial films at a dinner and asked the Army for them. None was available and the committee then arranged for the Soviet version to be shown.

At the dinner, a letter from Jackson was read, declaring:

"Isn't it a strange commentary on both American private enterprise and American Government initiative that the only way the New York Bar Association can see on the screen what was in many ways peculiarly an American project, is from a Russian film?

"I am wondering how the United States expects to compete with Soviet propaganda in Europe if it cannot even meet it on equal terms in New York City. I really think this event is illustrative of something seriously wrong with us."

Producers Interested

While all this was going on, however, American private enterprise had been trying to do something about this particular film. Several independent producers expressed interest in leasing for remaking and exhibition in movie houses over the land.

The most persistent of these has been the firm of Pare Lorentz Associates, Inc., headed by the man who started the picture. They have made repeated bids to the Army, offering to lease the film, redo it and show it on the usual terms. As with such Army-made movies like the "Last Bomb," "Thunderbolt," etc., the completion and marketing costs, including all risks, rests with the private company and the Government takes a share of the profits.

Lorentz also has offered to let the Government have final approval or disapproval of the finished picture.

"I agree that the picture isn't good enough now," he states, "But that can be remedied. I also agree that there is too much atrocity in it. We should take out some of them. And an epilogue should be added showing the new Germany and what should be done about democratization."

Justice Jackson takes the stand that the picture should not be shown at all in its present state. It arouses "too much sympathy for the Germans," he says.

His attitude raises a question as to the wisdom of the Army decision to issue the film as it now is in 16-millimeter for showing to school children, church and club groups.

"I've never understood just why the Army opposed this film," Jackson said. "It ought to be redone by someone like Lorentz who knows what he's doing. It could be a great picture, which everyone in America and western Europe would want to see.

"If we want to build a democratic Germany this film will help greatly."

Others Wonder

Others also have wondered why the Army "opposed this film" and have made some shrewd guesses. Military officials have suggested the answer privately but never have gone on the record.

In July Attorneys Edwin McElwain and Charles A. Horsley of the top Washington law firm of Covington, Burling, Rublee, O'Brian and Shorb (Secretary of State Dean Acheson's former partners) talked to the late Maj. Gen. Vernon Pritchard, Army public relations chief who was killed in a cabin cruiser explosion this summer, and to Undersecretary of the Army Tracy Voorhees about Lorentz's bid for lease of the film just a few days before Pritchard's death.

The latter, says McElwain, verbally anounced that the Department of the Army had decided against any commercial lease of the film and would issue it as a 16-millimeter Signal Corps product, in its present form. General Pritchard said that the decision had been made by Undersecretary Voorhees after consultation with Assistant Secretary of State George Allen, and that it was based on the fact that the film was technically lacking, containing too much atrocity and did not "show the relationship between the war crimes trials and democratic principles."

Later, McElwain talked to Voorhees. The latter declared, said the lawyer, that he felt a public showing of the film would be inconsistent with the Army's present occupation policy." (Voorhees has been in Japan and unavailable for comment.)

This latter reason—which many consider the root of the Army opposition to any anti-Nazi picture—has never been spelled out nor put on the record in the present case.

Colonel Eyster said the reason for the Army's decision was a lack of funds to complete the film. Investigation showed that it would cost $60,000 to complete the film and exhibit it, while it could be made into a 16-mm production for only $30,000, he stated.

He added that "earlier the Army tried without success to get Frank Capra and others to finish the film."

Eyster said he did not know whether or not questions of foreign policy entered into Pritchard's and Voorhees' decision against release of the film.

Never Discussed

"The question never was discussed on the foreign policy level—at the State Department," he declared. "The talks with Mr. Allen only had to do with the possibility that they provide the funds to finish the picture for propaganda purposes abroad. He had no objection to release of the film, but had no funds for issuing it through his channels."

Colonel Eyster said, however, that "foreign policy" questions always entered his mind when the matter of releasing the picture was considered, and that he felt it was present when his superiors reviewed it.

"After all, the whole philosophy of the American Government has changed since 1946 in relation to Germany, Russia and all of Europe," he said.

But Eyster maintained that the basis of the decision was that "the Army didn't have the money and no one else was found who was willing to remake the picture the way the Department wanted it."

Pare Lorentz insists that he is prepared to finish the picture at his own risk and submit it for Government approval or disapproval. Such a bid has been submitted to the Army several times within the past two years, he says, but never answered in writing.

Questions Raised

In addition to the immediate issues of the case, the incident raises the following questions—as yet unanswered:

1. Can the Government, in effect, "shelve" a film of public interest, not involving military security, by making it available only to owners of private projectors?

2. Should the Army be the sole judge of whether a film has artistic merit or is "good enough" for release, when a legitimate producer bids for it?

3. Why was "Nuernberg — Its Lessons for Today" not finished in Germany? (Funds were set aside for the purpose there, even though the Department of the Army now does not feel it can spare the money.)

4. Why is it being released in its present rough form—with bad continuity between voice and picture, poor sound, etc.

5. Is it because the Army is so interested in building an anti-Communist Germany that they don't care whether or not it is pro-Nazi?

"The issue," says Shirer, "is whether the American people are adult enough to decide what pictures they want to see, or whether the Army should do it for them. The generals are trying to rule on what we shall see.

"It's an obvious attempt to make us forget what the Germans are like."

Others have suggested that there are those in authority in the United States who feel that Americans are so simple that they can hate only one enemy at a time. Forget the Nazis, they advise, and concentrate on the Reds.

Jackson Observation

Justice Jackson recently made an observation, which while used in another connection applies precisely to the point.

"Nazism," he said, "has much in common with communism. We should oppose both. We should not be for one and against the other but stand on opposition to all totalitarian regimes."

A Norwegian recently summed up the idea expressively. Odd Nansen, prominent architect in prewar days and son of a famed Arctic explorer, tells the story of his days in a Nazi concentration camp in his book "From Day to Day." He concludes with these words:

"Accounts of what happened in the shadow of the Nazi dictatorship have ceased to be sensational reading or entertainment. They are a call to arms!

"And they are burningly topical as long as there is still a danger that it may happen again.

"The worst crime you can commit today, against yourself and society, is to forget what happened and sink back into indifference.

"What happened was worse than you have any idea of. And it was the indifference of mankind that let it take place."

Safety Plan For River Rd. Faces Delay

By James B. Graham
Post Reporter

Any program for eliminating danger spots on River road, scene of two traffic deaths last weekend, will have to wait at least until next year, it was learned yesterday.

The narrow, winding road long has been recognized by Montgomery County authorities as one of the county's worst traffic hazards.

The County Council, following the death of Treasurer of the United States W. A. Julian in a daytime collision near the Burning Tree Country Club last May 29, requested specific remedies from the State Roads Commission.

22 Accidents Reported

The road, with its many vision-obscuring hillcrests, again was thrust before the public last Sunday when a car occupied by three youths returning from a "going back to college" party at the Congressional Club spun crazily along the roadway and overturned after striking a telephone pole near Seven Locks road.

Killed in the crash were Currell Vance, jr., 20, of 3901 Connecticut ave. nw., and Herbert H. Mittleman, 19, of 3726 Connecticut ave. nw. The third occupant, Henry D. Jawish, 21, of 3701 Porter st. nw., was injured seriously.

Figures prepared by Capt. Ernest L. Thompson, commanding officer of the County Police Station at Bethesda, show that since 1946 a total of 22 accidents has been reported on a four-mile stretch extending from the District line. These resulted in four fatalities and 31 injuries.

All four of the fatal accidents were in a strip of less than a mile near the Burning Tree County Club. The fourth fatality was reported in 1948.

River road was called by Captain Thompson a "dangerous road on which traffic has increased tremendously in the past few years."

Pointing out the numerous curves and hillcrests on the narrow road, Captain Thompson called attention to the fact that it is heavily travelled at night time because of the several country clubs along it.

Speed Limit 50 MPH

While the accident totals for River road do not compare with those for Wisconsin avenue (U. S. Route 240), the police captain said on the basis of traffic volume they present a far more serious picture.

After the fatal accident to Mr. Julian, the County Council petitioned the State Roads Commission to provide better sight distances at the Burdette rd. intersection, scene of the accident, and at the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad crossing.

A request to the council from the County Traffic Safety Board for "a study and determination of proper speeds" on the road also was forwarded to the State roads body. Present speed limit is 50 miles an hour.

The Roads Commission replied, County Manager Irving G. McNayr said, stating that while it recognized the hazards of River rd. generally, it was felt that a complete survey of the road from the District Line to Potomac should be made before any purely local corrective measures were undertaken. It promised to make this survey, he said.

Now Being Worked Out

However, Henry F. Childs, chief engineer for the State Roads Commission, said yesterday the survey will be made this year, but would be "as soon as funds are available."

He would not, however, state definitely that the survey would be included in the 1950 program of the commission.

The program for next year is being worked out now, he said, "and there is more than twice the amount of work requested than we can handle with our present staff."

Childs pointed out that surveys are placed in the program in the order of the "greatest need affecting the largest number of persons." He would not comment on where the River Road project fitted into this scheme, saying it had not been fully examined yet.

Little Rock Man Elected President Of National Bar

Indianapolis, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—J. B. Brooker, Little Rock, Ark., was elected president of the National Bar Association in closing sessions of the group's 24th convention here today.

Brooker succeeds retiring President Thurman L. Dodson, who earlier had dispatched a telegram to President Truman urging appointment of "qualified Negro members of the bar" to Federal district judgeships.

The telegram to Mr. Truman, authorized by convention delegates, said the organization "heartily indorsed" the appointment of William H. Hastie to the circuit bench.

A STEEL STRIKE IS NOT JUSTIFIED

Philip Murray, President of the United Steelworkers of America (CIO), threatens a steel strike on September 25, 1949. Why? Simply because we and other steel companies will not bow to his unreasonable demand that unless we now agree in advance to the recommendations of the Presidential Steel Board, the Union will not resume collective bargaining with us. Before the Presidential Steel Board was established, the President of the United States gave express assurance that the recommendations of the Board would not be binding upon either party. It was upon that understanding that United States Steel appeared before the Board.

United States Steel has several times notified the Union of its willingness now to resume collective bargaining with the Union for the purpose of attempting to arrive at some mutually satisfactory solution of all of the issues in dispute. Collective bargaining is the method established by law for the negotiation of labor contracts. We renew such offer to resume collective bargaining with the Union.

United States Steel has already stated its willingness to join with the Union in a joint study of pensions, such study to be concluded by March 1, 1950, if possible, so that there may then be intelligent bargaining over a pension program. Furthermore, United States Steel previously has stated its willingness now to negotiate with the Union for a contributory program of social insurance, toward the cost of which United States Steel will contribute up to 4 cents an hour as its proper share.

If a strike occurs, the Union must assume responsibility.

Military Budget Cut Is Forecast

Brockman Plays With Care, Finesse

By Richard Keith

Thomas Brockman, young American pianist, played a brilliant recital last evening at the National Gallery of Art. He was received enthusiastically by a large audience.

The group of clavecin pieces by the eighteenth century composer, Rameau, was an interesting and pleasant change from the usual practice of opening with Bach. Although the modern piano and the reverberation of the hall tended to distort the delicate quality of the music, Brockman played with such care and finesse that much of the original elegance came through.

Two sharply contrasting sonatas followed—Mozart's D major (K. 576), and Hindemith's No. 3. Both of these difficult works were played with intelligent attention to style and with a degree of accuracy that is indeed rare.

The first half of the program was brought to a close with two modern tours de force, Ondine by Ravel, and the Russian Dance from Stravinsky's Petrouchka. Works by Brahms and Chopin made up the second half.

Brockman has a well-disciplined and agile technique. Most outstanding of all is his unerring accuracy. He plays without undue exertion or distracting mannerisms. Without doubt, he is one of the finest young pianists who have appeared recently in Washington.

By The Associated Press

Senator Tydings (D., Md.) yesterday said he has heard from "pretty good authority" the Administration tentatively is seeking to hold the military budget to about $13,500,000,000 for next fiscal year ending June 30, 1951.

Funds for this fiscal year may run about 15 billion dollars. Congress hasn't finished tinkering with the appropriation. For the preceding year, ending last June 30, it provided $15,283,000,000.

Tydings, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, disclosed the 1951 budget target in a radio interview. He had been asked by Gen. Verne Mudge, committee aide, if he anticipated any budget reductions for the armed forces during next fiscal year.

"I have heard—I don't know whether or not it is accurate, but it comes from pretty good authority—the tentative mark that is being shot at . . . will be about $13,500,000,000 for the next fiscal year," Tydings said.

"They are trying to find how these economies can be effected without impairing the strength and effectiveness of the three branches of the armed services," he said.

The Senate has approved $14,800,000,000 for the Army, Navy and Air Force for the current fiscal year. The bill now is in conference to settle differences with the House which had voted about a billion more than that.

Unification Hailed By Navy Secretary

Zanesville, Ohio, Sept. 18 (AP).—Navy Secretary Matthews said today that two years of service unification has put the Army, Navy and Air Force well on the way to the "unity, efficiency and high morale" of wartime days.

In an address at the dedication of the administration building at the municipal airport, Matthews commented that today marked the beginning of the third year of armed forces unification. During that time, he said, "amazing progress in national defense techniques and procedures" have been made.

The Navy Secretary, in his prepared text, alluded only indirectly to the bitter quarrel between the Navy and Air Force which recently reached a new peak in a statement by Navy Capt. John G. Crommelin.

"When one considers that on September 18, 1947, our armed services ended a separate existence which reached back 150 years, it is not surprising that it has taken the best thought and the best efforts out of the leaders of all the services to achieve what we have done so far," he said.

"Despite occasional newspaper headlines, this has been done with good will and the fullest cooperation of all concerned."

Matthews had high praise for both the first Defense Secretary, the late James Forrestal, and the new Secretary, Louis Johnson. Matthews was appointed Navy Secretary last May after John L. Sullivan quit.

47 Million Spent by U.S. On Veterans' Teeth

The Government spent 47 million dollars on veterans' teeth during the 12 months ended last June 30, the Veterans Administration reported yesterday.

Most of the money went to private dentists. It was used to pay for treatment of dental conditions resulting from service in the armed forces.

One on the Aisle—

Helen Hayes Shoptalks a Bit

By Richard L. Coe

"I LIKE TO THINK," said Helen Hayes, "that there is an audience for 'Good Housekeeping,' what you called a modest little play.

"Certainly audiences have liked it and critics, too, for what it is. Mr. McCleery has done a good deal of rewriting since we opened and will be doing more in the three weeks before we resume on a pre-Broadway tryout.

"But in the theater these days you have to hit hard. To achieve a raving success for playwright and cast, you have to have some decisive idea and wallop it. I'm not saying this shouldn't be, for it's given us some splendid plays in 'Death of a Salesman' and 'A Streetcar Named Desire,' but, surely, there's room, too, for a gentle homey play about nonneurotic people Americans know best.

"One of the troubles, of course, in creating a hit is that first-night audience in New York. They're all specialists, removed from the realm of ordinary living. A lot of them are agents, hardened professionals of one sort or another. I can't help realizing when I face one of those opening night crowds that in the audience there are at least 30 people, writers and producers, whose plays I've turned down. I can almost hear them asking 'What has this play got that mine didn't?'

"All that goes to make frozen spots in the audience, which easily communicates itself to those who've come with no business on their minds. And there are darn few of that type in a first night house.

"The critics I never find any fault in, possibly because I married a newspaperman. The news folk I know have an admirable approach to their work and I certainly don't think the majority of them come to tear a play to pieces. But the audience they see it with is not a typical audience.

"For instance, 'George Washington Slept Here' didn't get very good reviews from a certain critic the night it opened. Several months later, doing a column about matinee ladies, he happened to revisit the comedy. He wrote a rave about it. Said that lines had been pointed up and business altered. I checked on that with a friend in the cast. Not a single change had been made since opening night. But to that critic, it looked like a different play. It wasn't his fault, but that's what he thought.

Praise for Olney

"Doing a tryout on the summer circuit has been most rewarding. When I started this five-week tour that took us to Olney, my friends told me I was crazy to open in a new play on the summer circuit. But we learned a great deal about 'Good Housekeeping' as a result and last week at Olney had a better play than the one we opened with.

"You know, these summer theaters are a grand thing for actors and can be used for the playwrights, too. I'm especially fond of Olney because I have so much respect for Dick Skinner. He's gotten some fine casts at Olney; indeed, they're unusually fine and he has that faith in his performers that good managers should have. Of course, I'm especially grateful to him and always will be for the trust he's put in Mary.

"Naturally, I think my daughter's a good actress, and that with training and experience she'll grow. I don't think I'm prejudiced about Mary, though of course the possibility's occurred to me. But I know her well and I also know audiences.

"That's what makes me feel people will enjoy 'Good Housekeeping' once we get over that first night hurdle. After all, I've seen a pack more of this country and met a lot more of its people than have some of those specialized first nighters who never get out of a few New York City blocks.

"Yes, I'd like to tour in this play, but I have my Sunday night radio series again this season, so that won't be possible. We'll just have to hope."

Miss Hayes, needless to say, doesn't go on like that uninterrupted, but she talks so naturally and so knowingly that when you come down to writing of a conversation with her, her clearly expressed thoughts are easily remembered and flow together.

Anxious About Daughter

Last week was a trial to the beloved star. Daughter Mary MacArthur was in a New York hospital instead of playing with her, according to plan, at Olney. Helen was seriously worried about her.

Talking with her, you realize her fundamental appeal for audiences is her disarming naturalness and simplicity. She doesn't like chichi or glamour for glamour's sake. She'd as soon take a streetcar as a taxi and her unexpected visit to an 18th st. hairdresser's was not a whit different than a Government girl's date at the same establishment.

Praise for an Understudy

She had good words, too, for several youngsters in her summer cast. Shirley Standlee, who'd been an assistant stage manager, stepped like a trouper into Daughter Mary's role and Miss Hayes has admiration for her. Howard Stone, the red-headed fellow who played the photographer, won't be in the New York cast. "He's going back to college," smiled Miss Helen.

Her own immediate future is set. While William McCleery does some rewriting, all within the framework of the play, she and the family will rest on the back porch of that Nyack home. Then will come a couple of weeks on the road, after which, in mid-October, the Theater Guild will present Miss Hayes, once more, to Gotham.

If there is a more natural and lovable lady of the theater, who is she?

"HO, ME?" asks Nigel Patrick of Anna Neagle and Michael Wilding in the new British comedy, "Spring in Park Lane," opening Wednesday at the Playhouse

Yanks Win, 7-3; Williams' 2 Homers Pace Bosox Victory; Gilmer Tosses 4 Touchdowns, 'Skins Whip Packers, 35-24

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern:

THE REDSKINS may not have seen the last of Steve Bagarus whom they gave an outright release. He is now dickering with the New York Giants of Steven Owen, who used to moan that "We always had to put two defense men on Bagarus." . . . Clark Griffith is making a pitch for the 40 per cent bundle of stock in the Washington club owned by the Richardson family . . . If the Cardinals win the National League pennant, they will be the favorites to win the World Series, only if they meet the Yanks. If the Red Sox are in the series, the American League will be the favorite . . . North Carolina's November 12 battle with Notre Dame in Yankee Stadium has already set one college football record. With box seats selling at $7.80, it's the highest-priced college game of history . . . The Redskins' total of $65,000 in exhibition-game guarantees has given them a tidy profit even before the season opens . . . Three victories by Ray Flaherty's Chicago Hornets in their first four AAC games of the season, recalls Flaherty's boast of last summer when he said, "I'll have the best line in the Conference." . . . The World Series and this fall's football games have rescued the slumping television sales industry.

POVICH

CLYDE (SMACKOVER) SCOTT'S 81-yard touchdown run for the Eagles against the Bears the other day bodes ill for the Redskins' chances of winning the eastern division title . . . With Scott, Steve Van Buren and Bosh Prichard in the same backfield, the Eagles will be hard to catch and Scott is likely to be the rookie of the year . . . When he was playing with Navy, Scott once overhauled Army's Glenn Davis in an open field . . . Ezzard Charles will take down a bigger purse for fighting the obscure Pat Valentino in San Francisco, with his title at stake, than he earned against either Joe Walcott or Gus Lesnevich . . . American League umpires are feuding with each other in the dark, each suspecting another wrote the unsigned expose of umpires' hates and prejudices in last month's Sport Magazine . . . The Cardinals are openly rooting for the Yankees to beat out the Red Sox for selfish motives: the 70,000 seating capacity of Yankee Stadium for a World Series, compared to the mere 35,000 at Fenway Park. A difference in their checks, you know . . . The last time the Red Sox and Cardinals met, in 1946, the two teams took the smallest World Series checks in years.

JOE PAGE WILL win any vote to determine the most valuable Yankee player of 1949. He blames his poor season of 1948 on his own failure to tell Manager Bucky Harris that he was pitching with a 103 temperature during one spell, which weakened him for weeks . . . When Page first joined the Yankees, he was virtually run out of the league by the razzing of Al Simmons, third base coach of the A's, and was optioned to Newark . . . Another reason why tennis champ Pancho Gonzales will turn pro is the expectancy of youthful Mrs. Gonzales' second child . . . North Carolina U. recently heaped new honors on Charlie Justice when it elected him team captain. It was the first year in more than a decade when Carolina didn't elect co-captains of the varsity . . . Gil Coan of the Nats apparently will figure in a winter deal. When they tried to option him to the coast league this summer, four major league clubs held up the transaction by claiming Coan on waivers . . . If the Yanks lose no more ground to the Red Sox before those two clubs enter their five-game series, Boston must sweep all five games to win the pennant.

GEORGE KELL of the Tigers, now crowding Ted Williams for the AL batting championship, is no flash in the pan. Before he moved up to the majors with the A's, Kell's minor league batting average led the Nation . . . Notre Dame is proud of the scholastic eligibility of its varsity football players. Passing grade at South Bend is 70, but football players must attain grades of 77 before they are eligible . . . The Red Sox have been a lucky club in winning those 17 straight at home. When Bobby Doerr was hurt, National League cast-off Lou Stringer stepped in as the Boston second baseman and began rivalling all that Doerr had been achieving . . . If you note that the moon is in its first or third quarters, that's the time to disrobe and start swimming the English Channel, with the tides most in your favor. Tonight is favorable . . . When Stymie, winner of $940,000 in his racing career, picked up only $400 for finishing third the other day, it was barely tipping money as his earnings go . . . The Nats' Hagerstown team finished last, as did their Charlotte Club as did their Chattanooga team, as the Nats apparently will.

Rough Water Cancels Regatta Cup Classic

By Happy Walker

A strong southwest wind played havoc with the President's Cup Regatta's closing events yesterday, forcing a no-contest in the featured three heat, 45-mile Gold Cup event for the first time in the regatta's 23-year history.

Winds were so strong and the course so rought, that Gold Cup drivers reluctantly voted not to run the final heats for the famed President's Cup.

The question of who would retain the fabulous $15,000 trophy has not yet been decided.

Long before race time the Nation's top ranking speed aces gathered to groom their sleek racers. One look at the treacherous course, whipped up by a 20-knot southwesterly wind, caused even the veterans to shake their heads.

Meanwhile, hurried consultations were in progress on the official committee boat. Along two-mile Haines Point an eager crowd of well over a hundred thousand spectators, including President Truman, jammed every vantage point.

Van Blerch First

Right on schedule, the starting gun was fired for the first race of the day, the hefty 7-litre class. Two boats braved the heavy chop and made the agreed reduced two lap heat, buffeted from all sides. Joe Van Blerch, Freeport, L. I., in Aljo was the winner at half his rated speed.

Entered for the next event were some 28 tiny 48-cubic inch class inboards. Seven stalwarts answered the gun, only to be swallowed up in the wind whipped course. Jot Raymond, Dundalk, Md., capsized his Termite, crushing the superstructure. He was not injured. Four boats finished.

The lads made one more try in the D and E racing class. Three boats entered. Washington's Henry Lewis, in Bluebird, won. The Cupcake of Al Jefferson, Philadelphia, Pa., sank along the seawall. That was enough.

The racers in a body requested a 90-minute postponement. The request was granted by the race commission.

As time came for the second of the three-heat cup classic, all was confusion. Bill Cantrell, Jack Shafer, Chuck Thompson, Joel Thorn and Dan Arena, representing the Gold Cup drivers and owners, met with veteran referee, Charles F. Chapman. The group agreed to take a vote of the drivers at 5:30 p. m. and notify the committee whether they would race. If not, the President's Cup event would be declared a no contest by race officials.

At 5:30 p. m., the drivers and owners met and unanimously decided to cancel the race. Preservation of the valuable Gold Cup craft was the deciding factor.

Rough on Regatta Contestants

By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

Here's a sample of the tough conditions on the Potomac that forced cancellation of the President's Cup competition among Gold Cup boats yesterday. Part of the field in the D Service Runabouts is getting away above, with We-Gee (forward, center) in the lead. A strong wind kicked up such a choppy course that only a few events could be held.

Cards Wallop Phils, 15-3; Hit 3 Homers

St. Louis, Sept. 18 (AP). — Ron Northey, Stan Musial and Enos Slaughter found Robin Roberts an easy mark for a home run apiece and the St. Louis Cardinals swamped the Philadelphia Phillies, 15 to 3, today. Northey's blows came in the third inning with the bases full following a rhubarb by the Phils.

The victory kept the Redbirds 2½ games ahead of the Brooklyn Dodgers who defeated the Cubs at Chicago, 7 to 1.

The argument came in the third when Slaughter was batting with the count three and two. On the next pitch Umpire George Barr's right hand went into the air. The Phils thought it was a strikeout and on Andy Seminick's fast throw Marty Marion was caught in a runup off second and tagged out.

But Barr said it was a fourth ball, which nullified the play at second and filled the bases. Manager Eddie Sawyer and Russ Meyer were ordered out of the game for their part in the argument that followed. A few minutes later Barr went over to the Phils' dugout and put Cy Perkins off the field.

Nats Lose Two; Calvert Drops 13th Straight

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Paul Calvert became a man of dubious distinction yesterday.

He dropped his thirteenth straight game for the Nats to become the club's champion consecutive loser.

Until the Detroit Tigers beat him, 3-2, in the first half of a double-header, Calvert had to share the title with Walter Masterson, who dropped 12 in a row for the 1940 Nats.

Inching up on the third place Cleveland Indians, the Tigers completed their 1949 skirmishing with the Nats by rapping Sid Hudson for a 5-2 victory in the nightcap.

This left them only two percentage points behind the world champs with whom they have six games left. The double triumph, witnessed by a Griffith Stadium crowd of 8205, enabled the Bengals to win 18 of their 22 games with the Nats this season.

Colorado Aggie Star Dies Half Hour After Game

Colorado Springs, Colo., Sept. 18 (AP).—Eddie Hanna, 24, star halfback for Colorado A&M College, died of a heart attack shortly after the close of the Aggies' game with Colorado College here last night.

The athlete, a senior, played much of the game in his regular position. His coaches said he complained of a burnng in his chest after the game..

Death occurred on the special train which was to take the Aggie team back to Fort Collins. He died about a half hour after the final whistle of the contest which his team won, 14-7.

Coroner Fred Baker said after an autopsy this morning that death was caused by coronary thrombosis.

Gilmer's Passes Gain 199 Yards; Quirk Hurt

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 18.—Harry Gilmer began to justify his selection as Slingin' Sammy Baugh's successor here today.

The Alabama rookie led the Washington Redskins to an easy 35-24 victory over Green Bay's Packers in a National Football League exhibition before 12,873 paying customers at State Fair Park.

It was Harry's first complete pro game. Injured throughout last season, and an apparent flop in this year's training camp, the 22-year-old youngster did everything they asked of him today.

He pitched four touchdown passes as the Redskins closed out their exhibition season with their third triumph in five games. Seven of his 18 passes were complete, good for 199 yards. When the Packers pressed him too much he ran with the ball four times, jigging for a total of 58 yards.

Meanwhile, Baugh was sitting out his first full game for many a moon. He wasn't even in uniform. His insurance value in his 13 years of professional ball was being saved for next Sunday's league opener against the Cardinals in Chicago.

Despite the ease of it all, Washington's victory proved costly. Fullback Ed Quirk, 230-pound sophomore fullback from Missouri, was taken by ambulance from the field after a second-period crack-up. It was first thought he had smashed a small bone in his right leg. Instead, the limb was found to be badly bruised but Quirk still will be lost to the team for at least three weeks.

Gilmer's passing and the running of such bright young backs as Dan Sandifer, Pete Stout, Rob Goode, Harry Dowda and Jack Kirby was something to see.

The winning touchdown tosses went to Hugh Taylor, for 75 yards; to Dick Poillon, for 3 yards; to Sandifer, for 64 yards, and to Goode, for 15 yards.

By way of completing the rout of Curly Lambeau's club, Dowda got off a 19-yard touchdown run in the second stanza. Poillon added a single point to all five Redskin touchdowns.

Green Bay, which was losing its third game in five preseason starts, tried to match a rookie of its own, Stan Heath of Nevada, against Gilmer and came off with a back seat.

Heath didn't click for a touchdown pass all afternoon, and he clicked on very few passes of any sort.

The losers had to depend on old-timers Tony Canadeo, who racked up two Packer scores on plunges of 9 and 1 yards respectively, and Ted Fritsch. The latter plowed over for one six-pointer, added three conversions altogether, and chipped in a 44-yard field goal late in the third quarter.

Actually it was Gilmer's beautiful slant to Sandifer on the second play of the final period that broke the Packers' backs. They had just moved to within 4 points of the Redskins, trailing by 21-17 on Fritsch's 3-pointer when the roof fell on them. Gilmer was far back of his own 36 when he hurled toward Sandifer.

The L. S. U. speedster, who had hurt his team with several early fumbles, made up for that as he took the ball at midfield. By the time he reached the Packers' 40 he had Ed Berrang and Joe Tereshinski to escort him and neither had to leave his feet as Dan completed his 64-yard jaunt.

The score then was 28-17, and Gilmer's quick flip to Goode midway of the final session didn't help Green Bay's chances. Goode caught the pass as he twisted between the uprights on a 15-yard play, capping a 67-yard drive.

Redskin penalties accounted for the Packers' final score in the

Bums Stay 2½ Behind, Beat Cubs, 7-1

Chicago, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers got back on the victory trail after two straight losses in Pittsburgh by defeating the Chicago Cubs, 7 to 1, here today before a crowd of 34,580.

Ralph Branca, who hadn't won a game since August 1, finally registered his thirteenth victory. But he needed assistance from Don Newcombe.

After the Cubs pushed across a run in the ninth on a walk and singles by Bob Scheffing and Herm Reich, Newcombe retired the next three batters.

While Branca scattered seven hits, the Dodgers rapped Walt Dubiel and Doyle Lade for 10, topped by Carl Furillo's sixteenth homer.

Cleveland 7-3 Victim; Chisox Bow By 11 to 5

By Jack Hand

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—With Joe DiMaggio, sidelined by a high fever, Hank Bauer protected the New York Yankees' 2½ -game lead today by driving home three runs with a double and a triple in a 7-3 conquest of the Cleveland Indians.

Bauer slammed a double to the left field corner that snapped a 3-3 tie in the third inning and nailed down the win with a tremendous two-run triple to right center in the seventh. He also banged out a single in the second when the Yanks scored three times to get even.

"Must" Game For N. Y.

With Boston's thumping 14-5 romp over Chicago already posted on the center field scoreboard, the throng of 64,549, which brought the Yank home attendance to 2,035,679, knew this was a "must" game for New York.

Time is fast running out on the Red Sox who now have only 10 games to play, six of which are on the road. The Yanks play 13 more, nine at Yankee Stadium.

Once again it was Joe Page, mopping up for Manager Casey Stengel in his fifty-fourth relief job, turning back the defending world champs in the last three innings. New York has won 39 and tied one of the games in which Smoky Joe has done his stuff.

Cleveland opened up on Vic Raschi with a three-run blast in the first on Lou Boudreau's single, Mickey Vernon's double and a weird collection of two stolen bases, a walk, wild pitch, balk and a penalty for obstruction.

In that fram Larry Doby drew a walk, stole second, and was waved to third on the "obstruction" when Second Baseman Jerry Coleman sat on him and prevented him from advancing on Yogi

Kinder Wins 21st; Stephens Hits No. 39

Boston, Sept. 18 (AP).—Ted Williams slammed his thirty-ninth and fortieth homers and drove in six runs as the Boston Red Sox trounced the Chicago White Sox, 11-5, today before a 26,390 crowd. Ellis Kinder gave up nine hits while chalking up his twenty-first pitching win.

Junior Stephens collected his thirty-ninth four bagger and Johnny Ostrowski provided two Chicago tallies by homering with Luke Appling aboard in the sixth inning.

Kinder, who has won his last 11 starts, had a two-hit shutout going until the sixth, when the White Sox scored four runs on as many hits.

Four Chisox Chased

Manager Jack Onslow and Dave Philley of the White Sox were banished by Plate Umpire Joe Paparella in the top of the third inning and in the sixth Joe Tipton and Steve Souchock were removed from the Chicago bench for heckling that arbiter.

The Red Sox slammed out 12 hits against four rival pitchers while winning their seventeenth straight home contest. It also was their seventeenth decision over the White Sox in their now completed 1949 series of 22 games.

Randy Gumpert opened for Onslow's lowly forces and gave a

Lions' Passing Halts Giants

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 18 (AP).—A Brisk wind helped the New York Giants net two field goals today, but a strong passing attack meant a 21-6 victory for the Detroit Lions in a National Football League exhibition game.

Ben Agajanian made the two field goals in the first period with the wind at his back. The first was from the 45-yard line, the second from the 25. Never again did the Giants threaten to score.

Fred Enke, Lions' quarterback, passed to John Greene in the end zone twice, the first time from the Giants' 30-yard line and the second from the 21. The Lions' third touchdown came after Mel Groomes intercepted a pass on the Giants' 39. Passes by Enke to Kelly Mote, Greene and John Hollar put the ball on the ½-yard line and Enke went over.

Bill Dudley made all three conversions.

The Giants were weakened by loss of Charley Conerly, passing star injured Wednesday in a game with the Los Angeles Rams.

Gonzales Defeats Schroeder in Final

Los Angeles, Sept. 18 (AP).—National champion Richard (Pancho) Gonzales fashioned a methodical 6—3, 9—11, 8—6, 6—4 victory over Ted Schroeder today in the men's singles finals of the Pacific Southwest Tennis Championships.

Schroeder's downfall became apparent in the fourth and deciding set. Gonzales, seemingly fresh as a sea breeze, kept Schroeder on the move throughout. Schroeder had six chances to square the match, but each time Gonzales rallied to the occasion.

Pick the Winners

Post Starts Third Annual Football Contest Tomorrow

FOOTBALL REALLY comes into its own this weekend with an imposing schedule of games listed Friday and Saturday.

The Washington Post salutes the new season with its third annual Pick-The-Winners football contest.

The contest begins tomorrow with the publication of a list of 21 games to be played Friday and Saturday. Protect yourself by submitting your entries early.

As in the past two seasons, the winner of the weekly contest will receive two tickets to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, November 26, and an all-expenses-paid trip to this game for two.

In addition, the person submitting the most accurate entry each week will receive four tickets to a major college or professional game in this area. This game will be selected by The Washington Post.

The contest each week will include 21 major college games. Contestants will select the winner (or tie) of 20 games. A 21st game will be listed on which the "Probable Score" must be given.

CONTEST RULES generally will differ little from previous years when as many as 40,000 entries were received in one week.

All entries must be in the hands of the Football Contest Editor by 9 p. m., Friday, of each week. At that hour, all entries will be placed under lock and key. If your entry is received after 9 p. m., Friday, it automatically becomes disqualified.

Entries should be left at the Service Counter in the lobby of The Washington Post Building, 1337 E st. nw.

The person submitting the most accurate entry each week shall be declared the winner. In case of ties, all persons sharing in the tie will receive duplicate awards.

Winner of the contest each week will be announced in Thursday's paper.

Griffs Make It 98 Losses, Bow Twice

before being lifted for a pinch hitter in the seventh, had to have the help of Sam Dente to set his record.

Dente booted Eddie Lake's easy roller in the first inning and the Tigers soon turned it into the run needed to present Hal Newhouser with his seventeenth success.

The Nats dented the Bengals' southpaw for eight hits, one being Sam Mele's second homer of the season, a tremendous swat into the left center stands, in the fifth with the bases unoccupied.

Continuing his mastery over the Nats, Big Virgil Trucks flipped a fancy three hitter in the nightcap to score his eighteenth victory and his fifth over the Griffs.

Trucks pitched one-hit ball for the last seven innings, one of the two runs off him was unearned.

Hudson, tagged with his seventeenth defeat, was nicked for nine blows in seven innings and four runs, the last Tiger tally being scored at the expense of Lloyd Hittle, who entered the scene in the eighth.

Mele's homer tied the count at 2-2 in the fifth inning of the opener, but it remained that way only until the sixth inning. After Hoot Evers and Aaron Robinson had singled, Pinch Hitter Dick Wakefield rolled into a double play to drive Evers across with what turned out to be the winning score.

Hudson pitched a hitless, scoreless first inning, but regained his form in the second and third, giving up seven hits to trail comfortably, 4-2.

After two walks, an infield out and an outfield fly had produced the second Nat run in the second, Trucks bore down and the Nats didn't come close to scoring.

Grand Slam Tops Macks' Big Inning

Philadelphia, Sept. 18 (AP)—Pete Suder hit two homers, one with the bases loaded, to help the Philadelphia Athletics sweep a double-header today from the St. Louis Browns, 7-5 and 7-4.

Suder's base clearer came during a six-run uprising in the first inning of the opener.

It was a three-run rally in the eighth inning that salted away victory for the A's in the nightcap.

Southpaw Lou Brissie drove home the first run in the game-winning rally to get his fifteenth triumph against nine defeats. Alex Kellner turned back the Brownies for the seventh straight time this season to notch his eighteenth win of the year in the opener. He's lost 11.

AT MARLBORO.

DEAR FOLKS:

When last Saturday's crowd set a betting record for Marlboro with mutuel play of $467,644 the figure was remarkable as compared to betting on mile tracks some years ago. For instance, I can remember when Bowie officials danced with glee when a Thanksgiving Day crowd in the mid-1930's bet slightly over $400,000. Marlboro probably will average in the neighborhood of $325,000 from all indications. This would have been more except for the fact the meeting has only one Saturday. Marlboro missed the second weekend when legislation for two extra days went amiss and the track needed the late dates to finish construction. See you on the rail . . .

San Francisco, Sept. 18 (AP).—Exploding for three touchdowns each in the second and third periods, the San Francisco 49ers racked up a 42-14 victory over the Los Angeles Dons in their All-America Conference football game today.

A crowd of 31,960 saw the unbeaten 49ers win their third league contest.

The 49ers spotted the Dons a 7-0 first period lead, then came from behind with a rush to take control.

Dick Woodard, Don center, intercepted a pass thrown by Quarterback Frankie Albert and rambled 33 yards for the initial touchdown. Placekicker Bob Nelson converted.

Shortly after Albert raced around left end for a 25-yard touchdown and placekicking specialist Joe Vetrano tied the score.

Later Fullback Joe Perry cut through a hole in the center and ran away from the opposition in a 59-yard touchdown spurt. The 49ers made it 21-7 shortly after when Albert passed to Left Half Eddie Carr from line 26 and the latter ran 55 yards.

In the third period, San Francisco scored three times in quick succession.

Fullback Norm Standlee cracked the line for 23 yards and a touchdown climaxing a 55-yard advance after a pass interception.

Pete Wisman, substitute center, intercepted a pass and returned seven yards to Los Angeles' 24. Verle Lillywhite, fullback, scored on the next play.

The last 49er touchdown started from Los Angeles' 39 after recovery of a fumble. Albert passed to Right End Alyn Beals behind the goal line. Vetrano made all the conversions.

Browns Use Breaks To Turn Back Yanks

Cleveland, Sept. 18 (AP).—The rejuvenated New York football Yankees shoved the Cleveland Browns around like a bunch of scrubs today but Cleveland won anyway, 14 to 3, on New York's own mistakes.

A crowd of 26,312 sat through the contest, a large part of it played in rain.

The three-time All-America Conference champion Browns, outplayed in virtually every department, scored on runs by defensive Halfbacks Les Horvath and Tommy James, both former Ohio State University players.

In the first period, Horvath scooped up a fumble by Buddy Young on Cleveland's 16-yard line and sped 84 yards for a touchdown without feeling the touch of a Yankee hand.

And on the last play of the game, Don Pancieria, ex-San Francisco University Star, threw a last ditch pass that James intercepted on the Yankee 27 and dashed down the right side for a score.

Score by periods:

Cleveland	7	0	0	7	—14
New York	3	0	0	0	—3

Touchdowns—Horvath, James. Points after touchdown—Saban 2. Field goals—H. Johnson.

Redskins Turn Back Green Bay, 35 to 24

waning seconds, as much as Green Bay brilliance. After 64 yards of Choppy play Canadeo barely was able to get across on fourth down from the 1-yard stripe.

The Redskins handicapped themselves by a touchdown but still managed for a 21-14 lead at the half. All was well as Washington stopped the Packers' first offensive effort, even when Sandifer took Jacobs' punt. But Sandifer didn't keep the ball long. He fumbled and Cifers recovered on the Redskin 23.

In four plays Green Bay went over, Fritsch accounting for the last yard as he slid off a pileup and tumbled over right tackle. The big fullback gave the hosts all their 7-0 lead with the placement which followed his touchdown.

Washington's main threat from then until late in the first period was a 56-yard pass play, Gilmer to Sandifer in which the latter was called back from the end zone because the Redskins were clipping.

Less than four minutes of the period were left when Fritsch tried for a field goal from 45 yards out. It was wide and three plays later the score was tied.

Stout got up to the Redskin 24 and Goode added a yard. The remaining 75 yards to the goal were devoured by a looping Gilmer jump pass, sailing lazily over Kratz' head and into Taylor's arms as he loped along.

Taylor had half the length of the field to run, but there was no one around to molest him. Poillon kicked the extra point.

Seconds before the quarter ended Sandifer fumbled again, this time as he took a punt from Jacobs. But he recovered in time to bring the ball back to his own 29, and from there the Redskins marched to a 14-7 lead. Only one pass was used in the eight-play series, Gilmer to Kirby for 18 yards.

Goode and Stout carried the ball up to within 19 yards and then Dowda broke suddenly off right guard. A perfect corridor was built for him by Redskin blockers as he raced across without a hand being laid on him.

Green Bay bounced back to knot matters again after still another Sandifer fumble. From the Redskin 30, where Neal snatched big Dan's bobble, the Packers swept to the nine and then sent Canadeo to the right on a pitch-out. The grey flash was barely in bounds as he fell across the goal.

Nine running plays and a perfect pass at the end sent the Redskins to the dressing room with their 21-14 margin at intermission. Kirby, Goode, Dowda and Stout made the short gains and Gilmer ripped off a 28-yard sprint of his own as Washington went 55 yards to score. It was second down on the Packer 3 when Gilmer caught Poillon with empty hands in the end zone.

Poillon caught the ball with 2 seconds left, then kicked his third extra point.

Portmaker Captures Title In Farmington Horse Show

By Harry De Mawby Jr.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 18. Dr. and Mrs. Alvin I. Kay's Portmaker not only succeeded in adding another conformation hunter tri-color to his overflowing trophy room but also walked off with the grand championship honors as the two-day Farmington Hunt Club horse show closed here today.

The only Washington-owned horse in the show, Portmaker, accounted for top honors in the hunters under saddle model, and stake events; a second in the qualified hunters; and a fourth in the open for his 15-point championship score under the careful guidance of the Alex Calverts of Warrenton, Va.

John C. Hopewell's Circus Rose garnered blues in the open jumpers and modified Olympic tests and a second in the warm-up event for a 13-point tally which earned the jumper tri-color for the smooth-going gray mare. Spunky Fisher's Reckless from Salisbury, N. C., won the reserve positions honors after a final jump-off with Clarence Criser's By Day.

was the first to agree to the cancellation arrangements despite his Saturday's heat win advantage.

The race committee attempted to adhere to the program schedule with little success. Despite heavy water, one Gold Cupper put in an appearance, George Sarant's heavy weather Etta of Freeport, Long Island. She raced in the two-lap American Speedboat Championship, against Van Blerch who took second and Carl Widenhouse, Concord, N. C. who took third in Lazy Day.

The last event was the All-Washington Sweepstakes, which Aubrey Thacker promoted and won in his new Davis hulled Jezebel.

Despite the day's disappointing results, Jack Blank, chairman, presided at the award of trophies at the Willard Hotel early last evening. The awards were made mostly on the points accrued in Saturday's events plus yesterday's scratchy performances.

Perry, Bunn Box Tonight At Turner's

Welterweights Aaron Parry and Sonny Boy Bunn usher in the indoor boxing season at Turner's Arena tonight, in a 10-rounder.

Perry is starting up the comeback trail while Bunn has won his last five fights.

Perry rules a slight favorite, largely because of his potent right hand. Odds, which have held steady all week, favored Aaron at 7-5.

Bunn completed his training Saturday at 146.

Perry has been at his training grind for three months and weighs 147.

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez, who has announced that he will feature welter weights in his indoor shows this fall, is going to sign the winner for another fight in about a month.

Tonight's preliminary card is topped by a five-round featherweight scrap between Pat Thomas, product of the Golden Gloves, and Ked Payne, Alexandria slugger. Thomas has stopped his first three pro opponents by kayoes.

Long Strike Ended By Chicago Printers

Chicago, Sept. 18 (AP). — AFL printers ended their 22-month-old strike against five Chicago newspapers today by a vote of 1287 to 279.

After the vote results were announced, the strikers sealed their action by adopting a motion declaring the strike ended.

The unionists, who held sessions before and after the balloting, heard reading of a memorandum agreement between the publishers and union officials that strikers would be put back to work as rapidly as possible.

Priority Rights to Stand

The memorandum stated that employes who held priority rights before the strike will keep them if they report for work within 15 days after notice to do so.

It said that some time will be necessary to get type and composing equipment back into operation and to stop the present varitype and photoengraving process. The publishers indicated that they expected to have all strikers reemployed within 21 days.

The secret balloting followed a meeting in Plasterers' Hall on the West Side at which leaders of the International Typographical Union local recommended the adoption of a New York contract, covering 1500 workers.

"Best That Can Be Obtained"

John J. Pilch, local president, declared the document, already approved by the publishers and the union's international executive board, is "the best that can be obtained at this time."

The settlement proposal's provisions fall short of the demands for which the printers struck November 24, 1947. It calls for a $10-a-week raise. The demand which precipitated the strike was $14.50.

And its provisions for ITU influence in the newspaper composing rooms are less stringent than those insisted upon by the union during a long series of bargaining sessions before and after the strike began.

The publishers maintained that the union sought controls which would have violated provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act against the closed shop. The long strike has been in and out of Federal Court and National Labor Relations Board proceedings.

Day Scale Is $95.50

Woodruff Randolph, ITU president, has told the striking unionists that the agreement offered today is the best he could get for them.

It would raise pay for day-shift workers to $95.50 for a 36¼-hour work week, for night-shift workers to $101 for a 36¼-hour week, and for third-shift workers to $101 for a 30-hour week.

The local union involved in the strike is Chicago Typographical Union No. 16. The newspapers are the Tribune, Sun-Times, Daily News, Herald-American and Journal of Commerce.

All papers published regularly during the strike, using a photoengraving process which by-passed typesetting.

Jurisdiction Over Bridges To Be Studied

Efforts to untangle jurisdictional problems affecting the Virginia approaches to Key Bridge will be undertaken at a conference here Friday.

Participants will include representatives of Arlington County, the State of Virginia, the District and the Interior Department, whose park police share jurisdiction over the disputed territory with Arlington and District police. They will meet at 11 a. m. in the office of Corporation Counsel Vernon West.

The conference has been arranged by the Interstate Cooperation Commission of Virginia, an agency formed in July to study jurisdictional questions affecting Virginia approaches to three District-Virginia bridges.

Arlington Delegate Maynard Magruder, a member of the Virginia commission, said the purpose of the conference is to establish one-agency police control of the Key Bridge approaches, as well as of other areas in which jurisdiction is not clearly established.

Magruder said the jurisdictional problem at Key Bridge is the "most immediate one at this time," having been aggravated by construction of the George Washington Memorial Parkway at that point. He said fill-dirt used as a roadbed has altered the Potomac high-water mark, which heretofore has been used to determine the jurisdictional boundary between the District and Virginia.

An agreement must be reached as to whether the District boundary shifts with the high-water mark, Magruder said.

Besides Magruder and West, conference participants will include Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond, jr., and Motor Vehicle Commissioner Crawley Joyner, representing Virginia, and Alexander Knox and Robert Horne, from the Interior Department.

committee boat to watch the races.

When he got ready to leave, Mr. Truman had to transfer again to another boat because something went wrong with the Margie. Although there was a fair helping of Navy braid aboard, they just couldn't get the Margie running for the President.

He saw the races from the stern of the Margie, in company with the Regatta royalty, Queen Jane Lingo and members of her court.

Another visitor welcomed aboard the presidential yacht was Maj. Robert J. Barrett, Metropolitan Police superintendent, whom the President hailed as "Chief."

The crowd was spread the length of the west side of Potomac Park, from Hains Point to the railroad bridge. Part of it spilled over onto Gravelly Point on the Virginia side where a fleet of yachts was strung out with spectators.

At 3 p. m., after several thousand autos had literally saturated the Hains Point parking facilities, Park Police Capt. Mark Raspberry blew the whistle on auto traffic for the rest of the day.

The crowd, apparently not too frustrated by the delays and cancellations caused by the stiff breeze, relaxed, stretched out on the still-green grass, broke open picnic baskets and made an outing of it.

Occasional diversion came from music and spot interviews piped in over the loudspeakers in lieu of race descriptions.

The Red Cross emergency stations kept busy during the day, treating 42 persons for everything from headaches to sprained ankles. As usual, the youngsters got into the worst mischief.

Six-year-old Kathleen Shupp of 11 Dolphin Green swung her camera into her head and was taken to a doctor with a deep slash. And 4-year-old William Berard, of 913 N. Wayne st., Arlington, played with a broken bottle until he cut his hand severely in several places.

Many Plans Debated To Help Laid-Off Career Workers

Several proposals have been debated at high levels to amend the retirement and reduction-in-force laws to help laid-off career people.

The objective is two-foid: (1) to force older people with long years of service to retire, and (2) to provide jobs for younger people who are faced with the loss of their jobs.

This is the most provocative of the plans—a plan which has been knocked down but not knocked out:

In any reduction of force, the first employes to be laid off, at the option of agencies, would be those employes who were eligible for retirement. In the group would be those who are 60 or more and who have had a minimum of 30 years of service, and who are 62 and who have had 15 or more years of service.

The agencies would have the absolute right to force these people to retire—but only during a reduction of force.

This plan was recommended to the Civil Service Commission by one of its key divisions. Its retirement division, however, recommended against it and the three commissioners sustained it. But now, it seems, the proposal may be revived in both Congress and by several agencies.

Plan No. 2, it was learned, would reduce the compulsoy retirement age from 70 to 65. It sponsors have suggested that it be used to retire older women first and then be extended to male employes.

Representative George Miller (D., Calif.) is an advocate of a lower compulsory retirement age. He's supported by a number of agency officials but the Civil Service Commission and the Administration is opposed to the age reduction because of its heavy cost.

Plan No. 3—also backed by Miller—would provide an annuity for a Federal worker who was laid off in a reduction of force and who had a minimum of 20 years of service regardless of age. His basic pension, however, would be reduced 3 per cent for each year the employe was under 60. And it would be reduced further, to a very small amount, if the worker wanted to provide survivorship benefits for his wife and children.

Civil Service also opposes this proposition. Any employe who is laid off after 25 years of service may now retire under the same conditions. But as more people are laid off in the defense agencies there will be more and more pressure for the above or related plans.

STORY: A Kentuckian was told that the Bureau of Internal Revenue would be hiring new employes. So, he sat down and wrote this letter:

"Please let me know of the next examination for positions in your Alcohol Tax Unit, MOONSHINE DIVISION."

JOB NEWS: Civil Service has fixed November 30 as the lay-off date for nonstatus geographers, grades P-2 through P-8, and for political science administrators, P-4 through P-8, in this area . . . The 346 persons who applied for the P-1 librarian exam will be tested on September 26 . . . A total of 285 employes passed the recent test for cartographer of whom 163 were veterans . . . Only 62 applicants passed the test for physiologist.

EXAMS for firefighter, stationary fireman, and plumber's helper are open for appointments at the National Airport, Gravelly Point, Va. The jobs pay from $2350 to $2799 to start . . . At nearby Ft. 2 New Drugs Successful In Venereal Treatments

Tests Are Continuing At District Clinics With Aureomycin And Chloromycetin

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Early success in treating venereal diseases with new antibiotics, aureomycin and chloromycetin, has been reported from clinical trials under way here.

The tests were made and are being continued at both Gallinger Hospital's rapid treatment center and the Polk Health Center Clinic, at 7th and P sts. nw.

Venereal diseases that have already yielded to oral doses of the new drugs include syphilis, in both early and advanced stages, gonorrhea, chancroids, and less encountered forms of VD such as lymphogranuloma venereum and granuloma inguinale.

Initial results with the new treatments are given in a report prepared by Dr. S. Ross Taggart, head of the District Health Department's bureau of venereal diseases, for publication in the Journal of Public Health Nursing. The journal is the official organ of the Public Health Nurses Association.

Cooperative Project

The studies with the new antibiotics, Dr. Taggart disclosed in his article, are a cooperative project of the District Health Department, George Washington University Medical School, and the U. S. Public Health Service.

Dr. Taggart emphasized that the clinical data is still in its preliminary stage, the follow-up of treated cases is brief (such use of the new drugs was begun only about six months ago, he said), and the time-dosage relationship has not yet been clearly established.

Results to date, he reported, indicate that the two drugs, which appear equally effective, "may be of considerable value in all venereal diseases." Thus, the spirochete would be added to the range of disease organisms killed by the drugs. Clinical use has already found them effective against viruses, rickettsias, bacilli and cocci.

Dr. Taggart reported that of 63 cases of syphilis treated with oral doses of aureomycin there were no failures "except in four patients who were given the one-day (massive dose) treatment." He concluded from the early findings that the drug appeared most effective in small doses every four hours.

Another 36 patients, he reported, were treated for syphilis with chloromycetin on similar schedules, and with equal success. Against gonorrhea, he reported, the drugs produced cures in 90 percent of the patients treated, though only a few cases were treated for this disease by the antibiotics.

Tests against the other forms of VD cannot be termed conclusive, he stated, because of the relatively few patients treated. Where used, however, the drugs cleared up the disease conditions, including one particularly stubborn case of granuloma inguinale that had previously resisted treatment by both antimony and streptomycin therapy.

Dr. Taggart warned public health nurses that the new treatment has unpleasant side effects that patients should know before they start taking the drugs. These, he said, include gaseousness, nausea, perhaps vomiting, and diarrhea.

The report indicated that the new drugs might supplement, but not supplant, penicillin therapy for venereal diseases.

D. C. Dentists Paid $432,222 By VA in Year

Private dentists in this city received $432,222 in one year from the Veterans Administration for services to VA-sponsored patients, it was officially reported yesterday.

The local bills, however, are but a small part of the total of $38,813,560 paid for such services throughout the Nation during the fiscal year ending June 30.

A report of the VA program to treat eligible veterans for service-connected dental conditions showed that 430,271 cases were completed by private dentists and 83,372 by clinics in VA regional offices.

The report, by Dr. Bion R. East, director of VA's dental program, showed that Maryland dentists in the "home-town service" plan were paid $145,554, while dentists in Virginia received $539,499.

In addition, payments for dental examinations completed, but entrailing no treatment, totaled $15,855 during the year for Maryland dentists and $81,138 for the private dentists in Virginia.

The report noted that 923,995 cases were disposed of during the year, leaving a backlog of 163,418 on July 1 as against a backlog of 324,048 July 1, 1948.

Overcrowding, Deed Delay, Prospective Court Fight Trouble Falls Church School Board

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

CHILDREN FACE CLASS in one of the first four grades at Madison School in the 300 block of Washington blvd., Falls Church. This class, taught by Mrs. Sara Van Domelen, is housed in a temporary wooden building. Classes will be forced to go half-days this week to help relieve the situation

CAN DEFINE ANNEX—Children at Jefferson School on Cherry st., near Broad st., Falls Church, must walk five long city blocks to Madison School for cafeteria service and to attend assemblies. Jefferson School is an annex to Madison. Shown above are Jefferson children leaving Madison on way back to their school after lunch period

980 Pupils Enrolled Already, 700 as Fairfax Transfers

The one-school Falls Church system, which won its independence from Fairfax County in June, faces a three-horned dilemma.

The city's first school board, which is beginning to realize the full impact of the problems which come with independence, already is confronted by these handicaps:

1. Severe overcrowding in the Madison-Jefferson School, the only one of three city schools turned over to Falls Church by the Fairfax Circuit Court last month.

2. A delay in transfer of the deeds from Fairfax which has prevented the school board from making badly-needed repairs at Madison-Jefferson.

3. Prospects of a new court fight with Fairfax over financial terms of the school's transfer.

980 Enrolled

With the school term just under way, about 980 pupils already have enrolled at the Madison-Jefferson School, about 700 of them coming from Fairfax County outside the city. The high enrollment has resulted in an average pupil load of 39 per teacher, with some classes having as many as 48 pupils.

And despite the fact that the board must have title to the building to effect necessary repairs, there has been some indication the final transfer may be delayed for several months. A final decree, paving the way for conveyance of the school to the city, is scheduled in Fairfax County Circuit Court on Thursday, but Fairfax officials have said they may retain the deed until a State audit of county-city school finances is complete.

Most urgent school-repair item, according to Falls Church Supt. Irvin Schmitt, is a fire escape from the third floor of the school. The top-floor classrooms already have been characterized as unsafe by an engineering consultant employed by the school board.

In addition to these woes, the city is faced with the prospect of being billed for all repairs made on the school by Fairfax County since 1942.

According to Schmitt, the city had expected to assume only the $43,000 bonded indebtedness on the full repair bill, which instead, Fairfax officials have hinted they will ask the city to take over the full repair bill, which includes a $10,000 expenditure for toilet rooms as well as other items.

Schmitt said he had been told the city also may be asked to assume as much at $228,000 worth of the county's total bonded school indebtedness simply as a result of its action in withdrawing from the Fairfax school system.

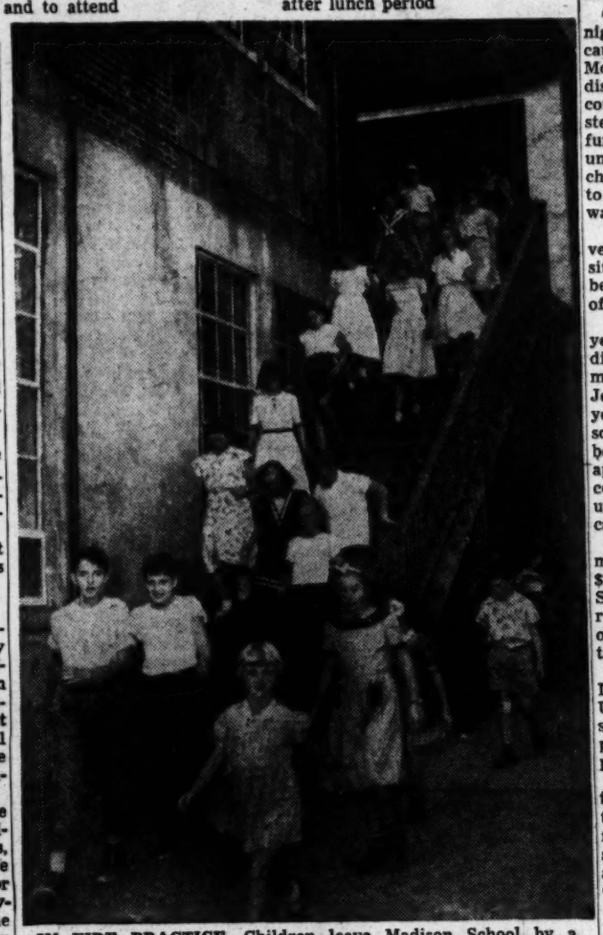

Pending completion of the State audit and further action over county-city school finances, the board has taken some steps to alleviate existing conditions. It has authorized half-day sessions for all first-grade pupils and the employment of five more teachers to offset overcrowding, and is now awaiting results of an $1800 survey to determine what safety or fire hazards may exist in the Madison-Jefferson Building.

Also, the board has under consideration and slated for early action these further alternatives:

1. Steps to acquire sites for one or more neighborhood schools for primary children, which would release space in the present buidling for elementary pupils.

2. A proposal to refuse admission to county students who now attend the Madison-Jefferson School on a tuition basis.

3. Construction of a new junior-senior high school outside the city limits, which would accommodate seventh-grade pupils now attending Madison-Jefferson.

Missing GI Telegraphs $50 From Ohio

Chapter 2 in the saga of Pfc. Joe Smith of Bolling Air Force Base was written yesterday—by Western Union from Cincinnati.

The 19-year-old Texarkana, Tex., airman disappeared early Saturday simultaneously with $157.85 of funds from the Visiting Officers Quarters cash register. Friday night he had been assigned to his first night as clerk and his first time alone with the cash drawer.

At 3 a. m. a visiting officer found no clerk, but two notes. One said in part, "Time AWOL 0200. Destination, God only knows. Amount taken, $150."

Officers said the missing amount actually was $157.85.

Yesterday, Sergt. George P. Yde, noncommissioned officer in charge of the BOQ, got a telegram from Pfc. Smith, sent from Cincinnati.

It was a money order for $50.

Significantly, Western Union added, "No message."

Howard U. Acts to Drop Dr. Corson

School's Officials End Appointment Of Head of Project On Dropsy Study

In an unprecedented action, trustees of Howard University have abruptly locked the door of the institution on Dr. Samuel A. Corson, associate professor of physiology and director of a research project on dropsy financed by the United States Public Health Service.

Dr. Corson's temporary appointment, under which he has been working at the institution's medical school and at Freedman's Hospital since last June, has been terminated, it was disclosed yesterday.

The trustees voted, however, to give him a one-year appointment, from July 1, 1949, to June 30, 1950, so he can find another post. But they specified that if he accepts it, he must perform no duties or no activities of any kind relating in any way to Howard University. This action also ends the research project.

Dr. Corson Present

In the period from now to June 30, 1940, Dr. Corson, if he accepts the contract, will be on leave from the university with pay.

Dr. Corson could not be reached last night for comment.

The Washington Post learned the action was taken by the board of trustees at meeting Saturday which followed an eight-hour hearing Friday night.

The hearing began it was learned, at 7 p.m. and ended at 3 a.m. Dr. Corson was present, along with representatives of the medical faculty who had been supporting his demand for a five-year appointment, and representatives of Local 30, United Public Workers Union. That group represents teachers on the Howard campus.

The Post learned that 18 of the university's 24 trustees were present.

At the conclusion of the hearing, The Post learned, the union representatives withdrew for consultation. Subsequently, in a letter to the board of trustees, the union withdrew its demands on behalf of Dr. Corson and left the entire matter to the judgment of the trustees. The union previously had asked the five-year contract for the scientist, and failing that, arbitration of the case.

Events Outlined

Officials of the university last night were unanimously silent on causes of the unusual action. Dr. Mordecai Johnson, the president, disclosed only the terms of the contract offered Dr. Corson and steadfastly declined to comment further. Dr. James M. Nabrit, jr., university secretary, outlined the chronology of events leading up to the board's decision, but also was mum on reasons for the action.

Dr. Corson came to Howard University in 1947 from the University of Minnesota, where he had been connected with the faculty of the medical school.

Because it was late in the school year and Dr. Corson would have difficulty in finding a new job immediately, Dr. Nabrit said, Dean Joseph Johnson offered him a one-year appointment, which Dr. Corson declined. He appealed to the board of trustees for a five-year appointment, and accordingly, was continued on a temporary status until the board could pass on his case. This took place Saturday.

During the two-year appointment, Dr. Corson was granted a $5000 appropriation by the United States Public Health Service for research into a new infusion method of treating dropsy, and earlier this year, $8000 was added to that.

The appropriation was made to Dr. Corson and not to Howard University. However, Dean Johnson was required to sign budget papers before the funds could be paid.

Last June, because of the uncertainty regarding Dr. Corson's status, Dean Johnson for a time refused to sign budget papers, and a squabble resulted. Abraham Siegel, a research assistant, and Elizabeth O'Leary, another researcher, who came from the University of Minnesota and is now Mrs. Corson, were discharged.

Dr. Corson reported last April to the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology that his new infusion method, involving the use of certain salts hitherto shunned in dropsy cases, had passed the animal experiment stage successfully, and had worked well in some human cases.

3 Fairfax County Nurses to Attend State Conclave

Three nurses of the Fairfax County public health staff will attend a State Health Department conference in Richmond starting September 27, Health Officer H. C. Bradford said yesterday.

Nurses who will represent the department at the three-day parley, Dr. Bradford said, are Mrs. Phyllis Ashford of Falls Church, Mrs. Francis Barcy, Arlington, and Mrs. Mary Colvin, Vienna. All three joined the county health staff during the last year.

Purpose of the parley, which will be attended by new public health workers throughout the State, is to acquaint them with department policies, practices and procedures, Dr. Bradford said.

Husband Critically Hurt as Car Hits Tree; 6 Injured In 2-Car Collision

District traffic deaths, 1949 . . 43

Total traffic deaths 1948 67

A mother of three children was killed instantly and her husband injured critically when their auto, which she was driving, smashed into a tree early yesterday. Another woman riding with them was injured, but not seriously.

Killed was Mrs. Ruth B. Phillips, 37, of 3100 Connecticut ave. n.w., a secretary on the staff of the House Agriculture committee. Her husband, Vearl F. Phillips, 37, is at Emergency Hospital.

Officials there said he suffered a fractured right ankle, possible skull fracture, will probably lose the sight of his right eye, and has multiple cuts and bruises. Late yesterday, he was still semi-conscious and had not been told of the death of his wife.

Phillips is connected with the Burroughs Adding Machine Co. The third passenger in the car was Miss Eva G. Sherbert, 29, of 1631 S st. nw., who also works for the Burroughs firm. She is in good condition at Georgetown University Hospital suffering multiple cuts and bruises and possible internal injuries.

The crash occurred in the 3900 block of Cathedral ave. nw. Police said Miss Sherbert told them the three had attended a housewarming in the 4300 block of Cathedral ave. nw., and started home about 3:30 a. m. Phillips was driving, she said, but lost his way, and Mrs. Phillips took the wheel.

At a curve, on a downgrade, police said Miss Sherbert told them, Mrs. Phillips apparently lost control of the car and the wheels on one side went over the curb and continued that way for about 70 feet until the car struck the tree.

The automobile was nearly demolished, police said . Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, deputy District Coroner, said after an autopsy that Mrs. Phillips suffered a ruptured heart, apparently from impact of the steering wheel, which was snapped off. He is withholding a death certificate pending further investigation by police.

Mrs. Phillips was a native of Middlesex, N. C., and a graduate of East Carolina College. She was cotton queen of North Carolina several years ago, and came to Washington in 1942. She is survived by her husband; three children, Judith, 5; Linda, 4; and Raymond, 3; her mother, Mrs. K. W. Ballentine, of Middlesex; four sisters, Mrs. Lillian Strauss of Washington, Mrs. Gladys Maddox of Chevy Chase, Md.; Mrs. Janice Meyer, Orlando, Fla., and Mrs. Mary Cope, Chicago, Ill.; two brothers, Kinchen Ballentine, Dunn, N. C., and James Ballentine, Winton, N. C.

Six persons were injured early yesterday in collision of two autos at 3rd st. and Virginia ave. sw. The driver of one of the cars, Thomas Justin Cox, 51, a Veterans Administration adjuster, of Cincinnati, Ohio, visited a hospital for the fourth time since last Tuesday, though he was not seriously injured.

With him in the car were his four-year-old son, Thomas Anthony; his sister, Miss Nona M. Cox, 50, of 212 Oakwood st. se.; another sister, Mrs. Hester F. Strylowski, 29, of the Oakwood st. address, and her husband, Sergt. John I. Strylowski, 32, of the Bollnig Air Base band. All were taken to Casualty Hospital and treated for cuts and bruises. Cox was treated and released, but the others were transferred to the Bolling base hospital, where Mrs. Strylowski was found to have a possible fractured leg.

Driver of the other auto was Maceo Alredge, 42, 2723 11th st. nw., who went to Casualty Hospital with a possible arm fracture, a head concussion, and cuts and bruises.

Police were informed that since Cox's arrival here Tuesday, he

Rescue Chief At Bethesda Suspended

Donald W. Dunnington, chief of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad since its inception in 1938, was suspended from office yesterday by a trial board of the organization.

Dunnington immediately appealed the suspension and a night hearing before the board of directors was held behind closed doors.

After a heated, four-hour session lasting past midnight, the directors set the suspension at 30 days effective last night. Assistant Chief Les Thompson was designated to serve as chief .

All members of the squad and its board were silent on the causes, and a note posted in the squad's station threatened suspension of any member who talked about the situation. The Washington Post learned, however:

1. The logbook of the squad shows that two members were injured Wednesday night when a vehicle driven by Dunnington struck an obstacle. One suffered ankle fractures and the other was cut with an axe.

2. As result of the accident, Dunnington's driving privileges in the squad's vehicles were suspended on Thursday for "failure to have a vehicle under sufficient control when hitting an obstacle."

3. Saturday night, despite the driving suspension, Dunnington took out a vehicle on an emergency run. His defense was that he was the only driver present to make the run.

4. The trial board suspension was entered in the logbook at 1:54 p. m., over the signature of C. Eugene Doyle, vice president of the board of directors.

Man Admits 12 Larcenies From Autos

Frederick Jenkins, 24 of 495 C st. sw., arrested on the Smithsonian Institution grounds early yesterday, has confessed to 12 larcenies from automobiles during the last two months, according to U. S. Park police.

Jenkins was charged with two cases of tampering and one case of grand larceny. He will be arraigned in Municipal Court this morning.

He was arrested by Detective James Lyons Private Paul O. Wheeler and Sergeant Charles P. Apfelbeck in a Park Police crusier. Apfelbeck said they saw Jenkins tampering with one automobile, trailed him and arrested him when he started to force his way into a second car.

When he was arrested, Jenkins was wearing a raincoat made of English freight-parachute cloth, similar to one reported stolen from a car in July, Apfelbeck said.

Archbishop Scouts Fear of Science

Rev. Mr. Williams

Cathedral Elects Rector As Canon

The Rev. Richard Williams, associate rector of the Church of the Epiphany, has been elected a canon of Washington Cathedral and director of the diocesan department of social relations.

Announcement of the selection of the former Navy chaplain for the two posts was announced yesterday at the 11 a. m. service at the cathedral by the Very Rev. John Wallace Suter, dean of the cathedral.

Canon Williams, who will take over his new duties the later part of October, will be in charge of the diocesan program of Christian social education. He will adminster welfare funds for both the cathedral and diocese, will supervise chaplaincy work in diocesan and public institutions and will head the church's city missions program.

Canon Williams also will participate in the regular schedule of services at the cathedral.

A native of Knoxville, Tenn., and a graduate of the University of Tennessee and the Princeton Theological Seminary, Canon Williams has been on the staff of Epiphany Church since February, 1946.

During the war he was fleet chaplain of the Mediterranean Fleet during the invasion of Sicily and Salerno and later during the Normandy invasion was force chaplain of Naval Air Forces in Europe.

The Most Rev. Cyril Forster Garbett, Archbishop of York, yesterday deplored the fear that science and modern inventions will destroy the Christian faith.

Garbed in the red chimere of his office, the Primate of England and Metropolitan spoke at the morning service at Washington Cathedral.

"The Christian," the British churchman said, "must not be a reactionary, looking back with regretful eyes to the past, and only seeing evil in the present."

Instead, he said, he should see that "the great discoveries and inventions of our times should be used on the old roads of truth, justice and mercy."

Declaring there is "much in modern civilization for which we all should be profoundly thankful," he said, "it is sheer folly and ingratitude to attempt to depreciate the great things which science has done for the happiness and welfare of the human race."

He warned, however, that "man's power over both material matter and himself has increased far more rapidly than his moral capacity to use it rightly."

He said that the civilization which has mocked Christian faith as "victorian" now finds itself "enveloped in deepening confusion and darkness."

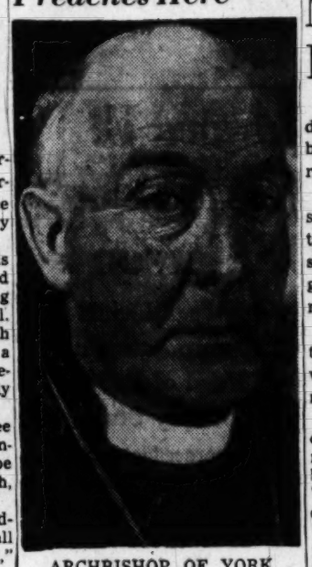

The church, he said, must use "penitence and humility" in directing a return to Christianity.

"A penitent church following the right road itself, and admitting that many of its members have often strayed from it, would be more likely to influence the world than a church which is self-content and self righteous."

The English prelate is in the United States to attend the 56th general convention of the Episcopal Church in San Francisco next week.

Today he will be honor guest at a reception at 5 p.m. in the Bishop's garden on the close of the Cathedral.

Board Clears Cottage City Policeman

Sergt. Albert Miller of the Cottage City (Md.) Police Department has been cleared of charges of inefficiency and being under the influence of alcohol on duty.

The town commissioners voted unanimously Friday night to drop the charges after hearing seven witnesses.

The written charges were brought by Donald J. Wilson, 3727 38th ave., Cottage City, who said Miller smelled of liquor when he threatened to arrest Wilson April 23 on charges of failing to obtain a license for a "hopped-up" racing car. Two companions of Wilson said they also smalled liquor.

Chief of Police James W. Robertson and Pvt. Lynn Plympton, who said they were with Miller at the time, testified he did not smell of liquor.

Donated Blood May Soon Go Into 'Pillows'

The Nation's hospitals will someday be getting your whole fresh blood in plastic "pillows," it was reported here yesterday.

The new pint-size bags, designed to replace the bottles used today, were previewed before personnel of the National Blood Program, American Red Cross, in first national meeting at Hotel Statler.

Purpose of the conference was to acquaint the workers with developments in medical and technical aspects within the program.

The plastic receptacles, newly designed folding equipment, will reduce bloodbank bulk to airborne proportions, said Dr. Carl W. Walter, of Boston, program consultant.

Dr. Walter, surgeon, also displayed new bloodletting and transfusion needles which can be cleaned in 10 minutes, in contrast to those which require daylong cleaning processes now, and individual lancets for infection-free typing of the donor's blood.

New techniques planned for bloodbank operations, he explained, provide for direct transmission of the donor's blood into air-free plastic bags which bulge out like small pillows with the incoming fluid. Nothing is added to the blood, and only the calcium removed in the bloodletting process.

Calcium removal is accomplished, he explained, by passing the blood through an "ironizing chamber," a disposable bulge in the plastic tubing between the donor and the receptacle. Without its calcium, it was explained, blood cannot clot. The process, thus, yields life-saving fluid which, properly refrigerated, can be safely used in whole blood transfusions up to 21 days later, he said.

Besides weight and space-saving advantages of the plastic receptacles, he said, they will also end gravity flow methods now used in transfusions. Physicians can squeeze out the blood to meet the patient's needs, or the patient's own weight can be used to force the blood into his body, Dr. Walter said.

Other speakers on yesterday's conference program told of work being done to fractionate, or break down, surplus blood into its component parts for medical needs only certain parts of blood are required.

Next, a cousin with whom Cox grew up became seriously ill, and went to Emergency Hospital. If he goes to Bolling base hospital, it will be his fifth such visit in less than a week.

Drivers of the ambulance and automobile were uninjured.

Frank Morgan Dies in Sleep; Stage-Screen Veteran Was 59

Hollywood, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Veteran screen star Frank Morgan, 59, died in his sleep today.

Morgan's wife, Alma, who found him, said her husband evidently passed away quietly while sleeping.

The white haired screen veteran, whose hale and crackling laughter pushed him to the top on both films and radio as a comedian, had been in good health, Mrs. Morgan said.

He had just finished working on an MGM film and was set to go into the role of Buffalo Bill in "Annie Get Your Gun."

Studio spokesmen said Morgan had been considered in the best of health. He is survived by his wife and brother, Ralph, 61, also an actor, and his son, George, 32, of Hollywood.

Death was believed caused by heart failure.

A veteran of 38 years in the theater, Morgan was the son of the late New York importer, George Wupperman. The family had become wealthy through manufacture of Angostura bitters.

Morgan was a toothbrush salesman, cowbody, sea-going stoker, and dishwasher in his youth.

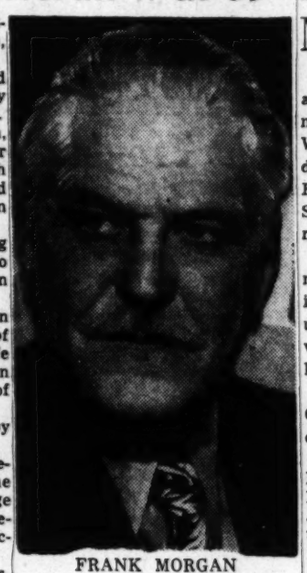

Born in New York City in 1890, he was educated in New York prep schools and enrolled in Cornell University, although he never graduated.

When he learned that his brother Ralph had abandoned his law studies and was now an actor, that was good enough for Frank. He dropped the surname of Wupperman and adopted the one picked up by Ralph—Morgan.

After a few bits in vaudeville, Frank attained his first success in a sketch prepared for him by Edgar Allan Woolf. After that, Morgan stepped onto the Broadway stage as a cocomedian in "Rosalie."

In that part his flair for comedy was discovered and developed. From that time on until 1932, he was in a series of hits, including "Seventh Heaven," "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," "Topaze," "The Firebrand" and "The Bandwagon."

The lure of Hollywood finally

FRANK MORGAN
Found dead in bed

snared him. In 1932 Morgan went West. He joined M-G-M in 1933 after appearing in a few pictures and has played in more than 50 pictures since.

Morgan's latest film appearance was in "The Stratton Story," in the role of a baseball scout. He had appeared in "The Great Ziegfeld," "Wizard of Oz," "Tortilla Flat" and "White Cargo."

His marriage to the former Alma Muller, a New York socialite, was considered one of Hollywood's happiest. They had been married 34 years.

"Frank Morgan was one of the screen's most beloved figures,' said Louis B. Mayer, M-G-M head. "He gave abundantly of his great gifts and made the world a happier place for the laughter he brought into it. His passing is a deep personal loss to me and to all in the studio who enjoyed the inspiration of his friendship."

Richard Ryan, Battlefield Hero, Dies

NYHT News Service

New York, Sept. 18.—Richard W. Ryan, 38, grandson of the late New York financier, Thomas Fortune Ryan, and one of the first Army enlisted men to win a battlefield commission in the North African campaign, died Saturday at his home, 133 East 64th st., of a coronary thrombosis.

As a sergeant in the Army Counter-Intelligence Corps in December, 1942, Mr. Ryan was the first soldier to reach the abandoned headquarters of the German armistice commission at Fedhala, Morocco, and he won a Silver Star for standing guard over important documents he found there, despite heavy bombardment of the headquarters.

A few weeks later he was promoted to second lieutenant in a ceremony in which his bars were pinned on by the late General George S. Patton, Jr.

Since the war Mr. Ryan has lived in New York and has been engaged in conducting family enterprises. He was a graduate of St. George's School, Newport, R. I., and was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Clendenin J. Ryan, Sr. His brother, Clendenin J. Ryan, was formerly secretary to the late Mayor F. H. La Guardia, and sought last spring to instigate a Fusion Party in opposition to Mayor O'Dwyer.

Also surviving are his wife, Mrs. Hope Bacon Ryan; two daughters, Hope and Alex Ryan, and a son, Richard N. Ryan, Jr. A funeral service will be held Tuesday.

Rites Tuesday For W. N. Still, Crash Victim

Funeral services for William Nesbit Still, jr., 22, former McKinley High School student who was killed in an Air Force training accident in Las Vegas, Nev., Monday, will be at 2 p. m. Tuesday at the Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin st. nw.

Mr. Still

A Navy veteran of the Philippines Islands campaign, Mr. Still enlisted in the Air Force in October, 1948. He took his basic training in Waco, Tex., and would have been commissioned next month.

According to Air Force reports, Mr. Still was coming in for a landing when his plane overturned and crashed. He was killed instantly.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Henrietta Still Carr, 2029 Hamlin st. ne.

Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

23,000 See 75 Baptized At Stadium

Some 23,000 persons gathered at Griffith Stadium last night for a service called by Elder Michaux "for the purpose of magnifying the name of God."

The climax of the service came when 75 candidates, all garbed in white, were baptized in a red, white and blue-draped tank of water perched on home plate.

A guest at the service was Sergt. James P. Hendrix, Lepanto, Ark., paratrooper who recently survived a 1000-foot plunge through the air when his parachutes fouled. The Elder called his survival a symbol of the "efficacy of prayer."

Speaking from a pulpit set near the pitcher's box, in front of choir of several hundred voices, Elder Michaux said the "building is not the church; the place becomes sacred because of the purpose it is used for."

The service included a dramatic choral sequence, abetted by fireworks, which portrayed the burial and resurrection of Christ.

Free tickets to the service were stapled to copies of a hymn which sold for fifty cents each at the ball park ticket windows.

Woman's Week

16-Year-Olds Decide To Take Off Pounds The Ida Jean Kain Way

TEEN-AGERS, take a look at your figures.

That gray skirt that fitted you perfectly last year is a little tight around the waist, but that couldn't be because you've gained weight. Oh, no. It's just because you've grown a little taller and you were bound to spread out a little, too, you tell yourself.

Ida Jean Kain, The Washington Post dietitian, knows your problems and this week has begun a series planned especially for you. Read the Kain column on this page today, take an inventory of your ideal weight and your present weight and go to work.

Giving the diet the old try is a 16-year-old trio. Sticking to if they needed to go on a diet. They appeared to be healthy-Woodfield and Dorothy Scates. You'll get the real lowdown from the Roosevelt High School girls in Sunday's Washington Post.

But a little more about the girls. None of the three looked as looking girls, not as thin as reeds, but not fat, either. The obvious the "no sundaes between meals" routine will be Sandi Wool, Jean question from their friends is, "Why do you want to go on the Ida Jean Kain diet?"

The answer comes fast. They don't feel well with the weight they are carrying. Sandi felt sluggish, while Jean had trouble holding in her tummy. And the inevitable boy friends were making fun of the extra weight the girls had gained over the summer vacation. The trio feels that minus five pounds they will feel better.

On taking an advance peek at the Ida Jean Kain diet, the girls exclaimed that it didn't seem like a diet at all. "Eat all THAT!" they chorused. There's no starving on any Kain diet, we told them. When you other teen-agers take a look at the Kain slimming program, you will probably decide that's for you, too.

THE Washington Workshop Cooperative considers "beginners in the "arts" as the "special and unique province of the workshop." So if absolute inexpensive in the arts has held you back from joining a class, this may be just the place for you. Registration begins Thursday of this week for the courses, which will be held on the top floor of the romantic old Walsh House at 2020 Massachusetts ave., beginning October 3.

Clay and plaster for the modeling classes are stored in old champagne bins, modern dancing classes are held in the ballroom where the King of Belgium was feted years ago and the creative writing classes work under chandeliers imported from European castles. In such an atmosphere, imagination runs riot and creation comes easy.

Classes this semester, in the fifth year of the workshop's history, include painting and sketching, modeling and sculpture, short-story writing, acting, speech and production; photography, radio acting and script writing and music appreciation. Fees range from $8 for the speech course to $24 for the art courses. The permanent membership fee is $5.

For complete information on the courses, which are offered primarily at night, call AD. 2309 or AD. 1225.

THE fashion docket for the winter season gets off to a lively start this week with the resumption of weekly fashion shows at the Statler and Mayflower Hotels, and the first monthly luncheon of the Fashion Group at the Washington Hotel Thursday.

Today at the noon hour the Statler's Fashion Fair opens, under the direction of Mrs. Gladstone Williams and Austine. At the same time in the Mayflower Lounge the regular Monday fashion show will be conducted by Miss Sue Boteler.

Other regular weekly fashion showings which have been resumed for the winter include those on Friday at the Shoreham and on Saturday at the Raleigh Hotels. New on the calender this season are those taking place each Saturday at the Hotel 2400. Miss Pearl Atkinson will be commentator.

THE Public Library will conduct fall term reading groups, beginning October 3 with readings based primarily on the classics. Registration starts today for these groups, which meet in various sections of the city. Call NA. 6776 for further information.

THERE'S a dahlia show to be held Saturday and Sunday at the Botanic Gardens by the National Capital Dahlia Society.

"UGH! Spinach AND liver," cries Jean Woodfield (left), as she scans the Ida Jean Kain diet sheet with her codieters, Dorothy Scates (center) and Sandi Wool. But the consensus after the trio took a preview peek at the Ida Jean Kain diet was that they would be well fed during the two weeks and still lose those extra 5 pounds

For That Janie Powell Figure

Teen Agers: Start Slimming Program Today

By Ida Jean Kain

This is the first of a series of 12 articles on teen-age slimming

TEEN-AGERS, stop sipping that chocolate soda and try this parody on your ukulele . . . to the tune of "A You're Adorable."

A is for appetite,
B you're the bulgy type, if—
C stands for chocolate galore
D means a dentist date . . .

Let's have E stand for eye openers that will help you tone up, trim down and have a figure like Janie Powell, glamour and all. But fair warning, there are strings attached to the reducing regime. No daffy diets! The system is to change food habits and eat to lose excess pounds, and exercise to lose bulging inches.

IDA JEAN KAIN

I began writing this column about the time you started kindergarten, but all these years, in spite of countless requests, I have shied away from doing a reducing series for teen-age girls. You are too likely to scoff at the dangers of inadequate nutrition. Being full of health, you think nothing could lessen that boundless energy. Chances are you'll scan the menus and declare you couldn't possibly eat that much food. Well, just between you and me and the scales, most teen-age overweights get more calories than that between meals, and think nothing of it.

Eye opener number one: Do an about face on food habits—eat three adequate meals a day, skip in-between meal calories, and you can be healthy, happy and normal weight. There are no magic ways to reduce weight and no little pink pills that can safely melt off fat. Never take chances! A talented movie star who reduced her weight at your age to conform to the ultra-streamlined demand of pictures, would now trade fame and fortune to undo the harm caused by unwise dieting during her formative years, but it is too late. And it is reported that a millionairess so wrecked her health in her youth with foolish dieting that all the high-priced medical men can't put it together again. This happens all the time to girls in everyday life who try shortcuts to reducing.

Before clipping calories, make sure you need to reduce. Many of you mistake pleasing plumpness for overweight and let six pounds of curves send you off to school without breakfast.

But it's a different story with you girls who are really overweight. You can and should do something about it. With 15 or more pounds above normal, have a check-up, either at a clinic or by the family physician. The cause may be glands, but only 5 percent of all overweight is glandular. Poor food habits are back of most overweight.

Your healthy normal weight depends on your frame. The following chart gives average weight for medium frame. If you have a small frame your normal weight may be slightly less; with a very large frame and heavy bones, you may normally weigh more than this. Ask the doctor. Get a clean bill of health and tomorrow start trimming the between-meal calories.

Fitted Black Broadcloth Smart Basic Winter Coat

EVERYBODY needs a really good looking basic coat. The perfect coat for this is black broadcloth—with a fitted body and a full graceful skirt. It should be long enough to completely cover daytime dresses.

The smart way to wear your basic coat is with a handsome fur stole—mink, or seal, or black fox. The Paris dressmakers revived black fox at their August openings, and I thought it looked wonderful. And if you want to be super-elegant, you can have a big round muff to match.

B. P. W. Federation Raps Civil Service For 'Discrimination'

By Genevieve Reynolds and Nicha Soure

ONE hundred and fifty-five thousand members of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc., yesterday accused the Civil Service Commission's rules of discriminating against women.

Led by Dr. Frances K. Scott of Northampton, Mass., national BPW president, the group issued protests against the Commission's present rules governing Civil Service appointments.

In a resolution adopted at the BPW's national board meeting in Jacksonville's Fla., the board reaffirmed support of the merit system in Civil Service but expresed grave concern over Civil Service rules permitting appointing officers to request certification of applicants of "one sex only."

The BPW board stated that since most appointing officials are men, the current rule frequently is used as a means of certification of men for Civil Service appointments and the elimination of women.

Urging the Civil Service Commission to rescind the rule, the Federation stated, "We see no justifiication for it in a society where men and women are entitled to equal job opportunity."

About Farewell for College Friends

Two girls in our community are leaving for college this fall. We, their friends, are planning a surprise farewell party for them. We would like your advice on games, inexpensive refreshments, an inexpensive gift, and just how we can cleverly let the two girls know it is a farewell to them. Could the farewell idea be carried out in our games and activities? H. V. W.

Probably the best way to be sure the girls are available and keep it a surprise at the same time is to call the girls in advance and arrange to take them to a movie. On the way to the "movie," you would stop by your home, or wherever the party is to be held, and there the honor guests would find the crowd assembled.

To carry out the going-away or travel theme, you could have the house decorated with toy automobiles, planes, or trains, depending upon how the honor guests will travel to college. If they are traveling by plane, set up a landing strip as a centerpiece for the dining table—another on the mantel—and hang toy planes from the ceiling.

If train is to be their mode of travel, borrow a toy electric train and use it on the dining table. Erect station stop signs bearing the name or names of the honor guests' college town. If they are to travel by car, set up a parking lot filled with toy cars for the table centerpiece—or make a winding road complete with trees made by sticking twigs in whitewashed thread spools. At one end of the road have a road sign with the name of your town and the college town at the other.

Start the entertainment off by placing the guests in a circle. The leader starts out by saying "Sue and Jane (use honored guests' real names) are going to college." The next in the circle says the same sentence, adding an adverb which starts with "a" such as "Sue and Jane are going to college ardently," at the same time acting out the adverb. The next in the circle adds an adverb starting with "b" and acts it out, and so on around the circle and through the alphabet.

A hilarious travel game is a travel relay. In advance of the party fill two suitcases with old clothes—hats, coats, dresses, umbrellas, etc.—the older and funnier, the better. Now divide the guests into two groups and line them up as for a relay. At a spot 10 feet or so from the first person in each line place a filled unopened suitcase. On the signal, the first player in each line runs to the suitcase, opens it, puts on all clothes in it, then immediately takes off the clothes, replaces them in the suitcase, closes it, and carries the suitcase to the next in line who repeats the performance.

Refreshments could be sandwiches wrapped in waxed paper, placed in a basket, and passed to the group as a train huckster would distribute his wares. Bottled soft drinks and fruit could be "sold" in the same way.

An inexpensive gift could be an appropriate book, an address book into which everyone had written their own address, or a box of stationery with one envelope addressed to each guest at the party.

My last child goes off to college this fall. I want some new interests, possibly some classes in bridge or art or story writing. Do you know of any? E. B. P.

I suggest you call or write the Young Women's Christian Association at 17th and K sts. and ask them to send you their printed schedule of Adult Education for 1949-1950. Included in this year's schedule are courses on bridge, art and writing, plus French cooking, interior decoration, flower arrangement, and many others. When you see the complete schedule, you are certain to find several courses which will open interesting avenues of activity to you.

Linen bedding, bath towels, etc., stored during the war in camphor chests, when opened were found to be deeply stained with brown marks. These I removed with household bleach and by hanging in the sun. Despite the fact that these articles are used in rotation, the stains appear again. Could camphor wood cause this? There is no evidence of moisture in the camphor chests. M. L. S.

When household linens are stored in drawers or chests they should always be protected from the wood and the finish on it by lining the chest or drawer with heavy unprinted paper. Properly finished chests—camphor or cedar—should not discolor articles placed into them.

If the discoloration continues to appear even when the chest is paper lined, perhaps you are not thoroughly rinsing the soap from the fabrics before storing.

Could you tell me where in Washington (or immediate vicinity, I could have expert quilting done on a crib quilt? M. G. B.

Our file of organizations and individuals in this area who do quilting is several months old. I wonder if our readers who do quilting, or belong to organizations who do, would send us that information so we can pass it along to M. G. B.?

We have an old (about 1915-20) Talking Machine. The winding spring won't work. Could you tell me if I could get a new spring for this machine, and if so where? E. L. K.

A gentleman who repairs winding type of phonographs can be reached by calling National 3464.

Baby's Eyes Need Special Treatment

By Mrytle Meyer Eldred

ACCORDING to the laws of various States it is customary to put silver nitrate in the eyes of newborn babies in order to protect them from any virulent infection picked up in the birth canal. This makes the baby's eyes red and puffed for several days but, ordinarily, has no permanent effect upon them. There is much discussion these days about the desirability of using some medicine which is less irritating to the eyes, and this may be a future plan when the advantages of other medicines have been thoroughly evaluated.

After this first treatment the baby's eyes may be washed daily with clear boiled water, or with a boric acid solution, or with normal salt solution, which is made of one teaspoon of salt dissolved in 1 pint of boiled water. Be sure no more salt than this is used as it might prove irritating to the eye. Clean pieces of cotton should be used to wash each eye.

When there is any secretion in the eye which looks like pus, none of these cleansers is effective. It should be treated by a doctor, or an eye, ear, and nose specialist so that the baby's sight may not be endangered.

All babies' eyes tend to show some crossing at times. Until about the third month if the baby looks steadily at an object the effort to focus upon it may cause the eyes to wander out of position. This inability to focus should not last over three months, and if it does, it should be referred to the baby's doctor who will take proper steps to correct it.

Parents fear crossed eyes, but unless there are crossed eyes in the baby's heredity, and unless this tendency to go out of focus continues beyond the third or fourth month, at latest, there should be nothing to fear.

Crossed eyes are an inherited tendency. What is done to correct them must be left to the discretion of the doctor. Sometimes, they are helped by binding up the good eye in order to force the baby to use the crossed one. Sometimes, treatment is deferred until the child is old enough to wear corrective glasses. Obviously, there should be correction, as an out-of-focus eye tends to become blind and useless.

Cancer X-Ray Tests on GIs To Be Studied

An intensive follow-up study of service personnel who received million-volt X-ray treatment for cancer will begin this week at Garfield Memorial Hospital, it was disclosed yesterday.

The subjects, including some still in uniform, others in veterans hospitals and a number now active in civilian jobs, all underwent the powerful ray treatments here on an average of three years ago.

Purpose of the investigation, which is headed by Dr. Aubrey O. Hampton, Garfield radiologist, is to determine the longtime benefits or harms of the therapy.

Financed by VA

Between 125 and 175 former patients who were given the deep-burn treatment at Walter Reed Hospital, Army Medical Center, are being asked to report for the follow-up tests. The project is financed by Veterans Administration, including payment of hospitalization costs, travel expenses, laboratory fees and other costs.

Rounding up the former patients is a project in itself, the investigators said. Those still in the services can be readily located, but they may be stationed at the far corners of the world. Those now in VA hospitals also are known, and will be brought here at their convenience.

The real difficulty, however, will be finding those returned to civilian status. Some, said the investigators, are already known to be dead; others have not been located and must be traced and their fates verified.

All Given Treatments

All were treated with the million-volt rays for testicular tumors by the treatment team of Drs. Milton Friedman, New York radiologist, and Lloyd G. Lewis, Washington urologist, while Dr. Hampton was in charge of the Walter Reed radiology department. Also collaborating in the treatments and follow-up studies are Dr. Irving V. Brick, instructor in medicine at Georgetown University School of Medicine, and Col. H. I. Amory, MC, chief of radiological services at Walter Reed Hospital since May, 1946.

Specifically, the investigators want to find out what happened to the tumors on which the X-rays were concentrated, and what effects the powerful rays had on surrounding healthy body tissues, including the stomach, intestines and liver.

Will Add to Knowledge

More generally, they said, the studies will add to the present small store of knowledge of just how much X-ray the body can take for maximum benefit and minimum harm. The results, it was said, will be studied along with patients and records of patients who have been treated for the same cancerous growths by surgery.

Dr. Hampton has estimated that the project will require about three years. He was granted $20,000 by VA to institute it and carry it through its first year. Supplemental grants will be requested of VA to complete the investigations.

The Garfield Hospital tests, in some instances, may require up to 10 days' hospitalization. Other patients, however, may be tested on an out-patient basis, reporting to the hospital and its laboratories only for the actual test procedures.

Based on Study

Non-Insulin Diabetic Cure Is Reported

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 18 (U.P.).—A study of 4000 patients showed tonight that some adult victims of diabetes can be treated successfully without insulin injections or with comparatively small amounts.

The report, by Dr. Michael Somogyi, biochemist of the Jewish Hospital, St. Louis, Mo., was made public by the American Chemical Society on the eve of its 116th national meeting Monday. About 15,000 scientists will attend.

Dr. Somogyi said the noninsulin treatment, developed over 14 years, emphasizes careful control of diet, particularly with regard to fats. He reported that insulin itself has been found to increase the severity of diabetes if given in such quantity that it lowers the blood sugar content below normal.

Dr. Somogyi's report said that "those innumerable patients who at present receive large daily doses of insulin—50 to 100 or even 150 units—are actually victims of chronic insulin poisoning." Such poisoning, he said, makes the patients a handicapped group, suffering constantly from fatigue, depression, irritability and neurosis."

It has been estimated about one million persons in this country are receiving treatment for diabetes, and another one million have the disease and are not being treated.

"By giving liberal protein and carbohydrate rations, and by restricting the fat ration, one factor is eliminated that causes an unnecessary increase of the insulin dosage," he said.

His theory is that fatty infiltration of the liver and certain other tissues may inhibit normal insulin action.

Dr. Somogyi said that "with new approach, most children require less that 20 units of insulin per day."

Aid to Church Schools Hit

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Rev. D. Frederick Brown Harris, chaplain of the United States Senate, said on his return from Europe today that he was opposed to Federal aid to church schools of any faith.

Asked to comment on Federal aid to education as he arrived aboard the liner America from a European vacation, Dr. Harris replied:

"I am naturally opposed to all aid to church schools, regardless of denomination. I do not think Federal money should be available to any particular church school."

For 25 years Dr. Harris has been pastor of the Foundry Methodist Church in Washington.

He said that "religious life in England is rather at a low ebb. They are complaining of low attendance, generally, at British churches. There are signs, though, of a turn in the tide."

IMMEDIATE POSSESSION, 3909 Parsons rd., 1 block north of Jones Bridge rd., ½ block west of Conn. ave., North Chevy Chase, Md.—New, 5 spacious bedrooms with closets to match; 2 baths; bedrm. and bath on 1st flr.; must be seen to be appreciated. Open daily 2-6. Kindly ask about Nos. 8904 and 3905, Fulton R. Gordon, owner, DI. 5230, 1427 Eye st. nw.

WHITE OR COLORED—Either one who gets there first—gets the property. Both are negotiating. 500 acres, located 4 blocks beyond the District line, in Maryland, in the zone of the new South Capitol St. Bridge. I bought this property 20 years ago at $500 an acre. The bridge was then just talk. Now it's almost completed. The property is cheaper today at $2,500 an acre than when I bought it for $500 an acre. This bridge will affect real estate values 40 miles beyond our property. This brings these 500 acres within 12 minutes' automobile time of downtown D. C. When I bought in Chevy Chase, D. C., 47 years ago, at an average of $2,000 an acre, one acre of it now where the Peoples Drug Store at Conn. ave. and McKinley is worth at the rate of a million dollars an acre, which is more than I paid for the 400 acres. This South Capitol st. property should do as well in increased value as the Chevy Chase property. If you have vision and faith and use it correctly you will find that Washington is the finest real estate town in the world. Fulton R. Gordon, jr., 1427 Eye st. nw. DI. 5230. Brokers, attention.

Ancell Takes Over In Alexandria

Gifts for All

Yule Toys Shown in D. C. Preview

District druggists yesterday gave the public a glimpse of the new line of merchandise with which they hope to make Junior gurgle with happiness on Christmas night.

In the Hall of Nations ballroom of the Washington Hotel, the druggists displayed hundreds of toys from life-size Joe Palooka punching bags, miniature pin ball machines and pool tables, to Babe Ruth wrist watches inside autographed plastic baseballs, a compact airport on which a plane taxis, takes off and lands, Pop Eye musical pipes and a new line of weapons.

The three-day exhibition is sponsored by the District Wholesale Drug Corp., composed of men convinced that the day has passed when people expect a drug store to carry only drugs.

Merchandise is displayed for all the family. For the women who always lose their spectacles the druggists will sell bands of gold, pearls, or plaids to keep the cheaters around the neck when not on the eyes. The usual line of things to make madame look and smell swell will also be available. And if the budget will stand it, the druggists are offering an electric washer for $29.99.

For father there are electric drills, cocktail shakers, pocket fire extinguishers, outdoor cooking utensils, and knives, even leather checkbook holders.

And then, of course, notepaper to write thank-you letters.

Templars in Parade

San Francisco, Sept. 18 (AP).—Thousands of Knights Templar paraded up Market Street today in opening festivities of their forty-fourth triennial conclave.

Ancell

W. Guy Ancell, Alexandria's new city manager, today gets down to the serious business of managing the affairs of a municipality of nearly 100,000.

The hulking, 51-year-old former manager of Portsmouth, Va., was officially sworn in last Thursday, but spent his first few days in office in familiarizing himself with his new duties. The "orientation" period over, he is ready to take over as the city's fourth separate city manager in a 26-month period.

The city is paying Ancell $15,000 a year—nearly twice the $8500 paid his predecessors—in an effort to give some stability to the office where a manager has stayed hardly long enough to take off his hat since Carl Budwesky quit in August, 1947.

Budwesky, an Alexandria attorney, was succeeded by Nicholas A. Colasanto, another local attorney. Colasanto stayed 17 months but was under pressure to resign for some time before his discharge last March. Robert S. Marshall, jr., Alexandria housing official, followed Colasanto on a temporary basis. eBtween managers, former City Attorney Joseph M. Pancoast served short hitches as acting manager.

The council picked Ancell because (1) he had a good record with 17 years experience as town and city manager, and (2) he was a stranger to Alexandria who couldn't be accused of prejudice or political connection.

Ancell was named town manager of Orange, Va. in 1932. Since then, he has been town manager of Covington, Va. and manager of the Virginia cities of Hopewell, Staunton and Portsmouth.

The manager of another large Virginia community yesterday described Ancell as being "on the top of the field in Virginia."

"If Alexandria has troubles," he said, "he's the fellow who can straighten them out."

"Doggone it! We got our OWN umbrella back!"

Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—The 4 Yugoslav student-engineers who were to embark on a United States tour with others invited to this country by the N. A. M.—suddenly were recalled to Belgrade . . . Douglas Fairbanks, jr., now in Italy making "State Secret" for Alexander Korda, is receiving new honors: Officer of St. John's of Jerusalem, a branch of the Knights of Malta; the Order of King George I, from Greece, and an Italian decoration. The United States Government has more missions for him. "If I had a good job, I'd leave this business," says Fairbanks. "I hate the easy way—which is acting" . . . Ingetraude Hinze, who plays the leading role in the Rosselini film "Germany, Year Zero," was found by Rosselini on a Berlin bread-line . . . George Jessel says he's been around so long, "I've seen Jolson come and go, come and go, and come and go."

Frank Maxwell, now playing the Cameron Mitchell role in the London production of "Death of a Salesman," is a tough, rugged little man. Some of his actor friends were discussing Maxwell's current role, and one of them said: "I wonder if his long stay in London will influence him, so that he'll return with broad A's and half-swallowed words?" . . . "No," said Phil Coolidge, "Frank's the only actor who'll return from London a Cockney."

Eddie Rickenbacker, who just returned from a South American tour, was accompanied by Arthur Godfrey. In Santiago, Chile, when the rebels fired machine guns at officials arriving for their dinner reception at the Union League Club, Rickenbacker and Godfrey first flattened themselves against a brick wall to dodge the bullets, and then fled. . . . Capt. Rickenbacker had read many mazagine articles about Godfrey and his weak leg which was once shattered. "I want a doctor to check on Godfrey's leg," said Rickenbacker, "because when I ran from those bullets, it was at 90 miles an hour—and Godfrey passed me."

An Aid to Home Nursing

Do you know the best methods of preparing a mustard plaster, giving a sponge bath or making a comfortable bed? If you don't, the American Red Cross can help you.

Naturally, when there is illness in the home, a doctor should be called. There are many times, however, when slight colds, a sprained muscle or some other minor ailment can be cared for without medical supervision. Doctors often will order simple treatments that can be carried out by someone at home.

Comfort during illness is important. A sponge bath when a child has a fever is most refreshing and often helps "bring down" the fever. A smoothly made bed that will stay that way is also a great help to the ill person.

Perhaps a course in Home Nursing is given periodically in your community. Such a course is open to anyone. If there aren't such courses planned, you can get a great deal from the Red Cross Home Nursing Book, which can be ordered through your chapter of the Red Cross.

TRY IT — DROP A CLOTHESPIN IN A MILK BOTTLE

When I was a boy we played this game of dropping clothespins into a milk bottle at the first party I ever attended. The boy who had the party lived on a dairy farm which his father owned, so that milk bottles were plentiful and at that time clothespins were about a nickel a dozen. This game can be assembled in most any home and challenges the eyes and nerves of the players.

To play the game give each player 10 clothespins and have him try to drop as many as possible into the milk bottle, while standing perfectly straight. The variations of this game are numerous for the player can stand on an old chair, lean over the back of one, or try to drop them backwards over his shoulder.

If many people play, several bottles will speed the players' turns. Keep score and pin up the results with clothespins.

CORPORATION

Q. A man who had invented a kitchenware gadget wanted to form a corporation for the purpose of marketing it. Being a resident of the District of Columbia, he felt that in loyalty to his place of residence he should form a District corporation, but he had heard there were advantages to forming a Delaware corporation. Upon examination, what would he find?

A. He would find a number of differences, among which are these: (1) Incorporators in the District have to prove that all the capital stock has been subscribed and that 10 percent of it has been paid in, and this is not so in Delaware. (2) A District corporation is limited to one purpose or to allied purposes, but the Delaware requirement is less strict. (3) Directors of a Delaware corporation need neither be stockholders nor citizens; in the District, they must be stockholders and most must be citizens. (4) District corporations may not use their money to buy stock of other corporations; not so as to Delaware. (5) Delaware rules about keeping corporate books are less stringent. (6) The Delaware annual report need not be published; in the District, the report must be. For these and other reasons, the man's lawyer probably would advise him to organize a Delaware corporation.

If Ever We Meet

I do remember when we talked . . . and we were all alone . . . And when I held your hand and said . . . That I would be your own . . . Yes, I remember when the stars . . . Were silvery and bright . . . And when I took you in my arms . . . And kissed your lips good-night . . . And I remember every street . . . And every corner too . . . Where you and I would meet and I . . . Would say hello to you . . . No, I have not forgotten, love . . . And all that I can say . . . Is that I wish this moment were . . . The same as yesterday . . . But if we ever meet again . . . I vow with all my heart . . . That I will always treasure you . . . And we will never part.

Take Your Choice, But Don't Forget to Pay The Bills on Time

R. G. Brown of 3274 Martha Custis dr., Alexandria, Va., says that the telephone company's instructions for paying bills are a bit confusing.

"Their return envelopes say: 'Inclose notice with your payment and retain stub for your records.' But the bill says: 'Enclose this stub with payment.'"

Which is confusing—the instructions regarding the stub or the indecision regarding the spelling of inclose-enclose?

THAT'S ALL.

Herbert Appleton of 8201 Schrider st., Silver Spring, Md., is pretty disgusted with WWDC's programming for Transit Radio.

Herb says that the soft "Musak" type of music promised to streetcar and bus passengers has turned into "last year's swing and 1933 jazz." And those "dignified institutional announcements" are actually anything but.

"In fact," sighs Herb, "my only objection to Transit Radio is that it's audible."

GOOD QUESTION

A few days ago I quoted Capt. Mark H. Raspberry of the Park Police on the subject of towing away the illegally parked cars of out-of-towners.

Captain Raspberry said that the Park Police had "tried" courtesy tickets, but that didn't work, so sterner measures were employed.

But J. Harry Phillips, jr., of 2222 I st. nw., fielded that explanation on the first bounce and comes back with this:

"Isn't it true that most of these out-of-town visitors are here for the first time? And if it is, then isn't it also true that the visitor who violates the law today is not the same fellow who got the warning yesterday?

"To say that courtesy tickets don't work is the same as saying that we ought to abolish education, because each succeeding generation is born untutored."

Harry concludes with the query: "Why not recognize the need for providing more and more convenient parking areas for these out-of-towners? But don't ask me where—that's not my problem."

PERSONAL NOTES

Yvonne Risher, 54 M st. nw: Capital Transit could get plenty of operators by raising wages. But that would also mean raising fares—and that's one argument I'll stay out of.

WEST OF THE HUDSON

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Redding of 6211 Lee hwy., Arlington, Va., have just returned to Washington after living in New Rochelle, N. Y., for a number of years.

Their youngest son, who is 6 now, was born in New Rochelle. The soft, Southern flavor of Washington speech is strange to his ears.

The other day, he said to his mother: "When you speak to people here, you can speak Washington, Mom; but when you speak to me, speak New Rochelle."

Because of these speech difficulties, he wasn't very optimistic about the prospect of making friends with the neighbors. But yesterday he came home quite elated and reported:

"The lady next door is a good friend of mine now, Mother. She speaks New Rochelle, too."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Junking of the Ban on Junkets

By Drew Pearson

More information has leaked out of the National Defense Department which makes it as plain as the nose on your face as to why usually forthright Secretary Louie Johnson backtracked so suddenly on banning those private airplane junkets at the taxpayers' expense.

Pearson

For Johnson's face would have been a lot redder than those of Senators and Congressmen if all the facts about airplane rides by bigwigs were aired to the public.

In late July, for instance, the Dewdrop, built by the Air Force for "President" Dewey, made a special trip to the annual jubilee at Bohemian Grove, Calif., with a cargo of special friends of Secretary of Defense Johnson and Undersecretary Steve Early. Johnson's friends were New York businessmen, while Early's friends were officials of the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing Co., of which Early was once vice president.

The passengers included Champ Carry, president of Pullman-Standard; D. A. Crawford, a director of Pullman-Standard; Robert Lea, president of Johns-Manville; and James A. Jackson, 120 Broadway, New York. Steve Early and Undersecretary of State John Peurifoy were the only Government passengers aboard.

Upon reaching San Francisco, the plane flew back to Washington—at a cost of $130 an hour. Then it took Johnson and Secretary of State Acheson on a separate and special trip to the jamboree at Bohemian Grove—again at a cost of $130 an hour.

If the above passengers had secured free passes on the railroads—with the exception of the Pullman officials—it would have been against the law. For long ago the railroad pass scandal got so bad that Congress passed legislation forbidding it. Meanwhile, the free airplane ride scandal has become worse.

Airplane Run-Around

Believing the public is entitled to know who uses up their tax money on these free rides, this columnist queried the official Air Force spokesman, Steve Leo. He replied that all flights of "executive planes" were handled direct by Secretary Johnson's office and referred the query to Col. Kenneth Kreps in Johnson's office.

Colonel Kreps, polite but jittery, admitted he knew something about these flights, but referred the query to his chief, Gen. Leven C. Allen. Gen. Allen, in turn, referred the query to an official Defense Department spokesman who squirmed, hedged, blushed and said absolutely nothing.

Careful notes were taken, and here is the transcript of the conversation:

Spokesman: "I don't think you are going to get any information from us. Secretary of Defense Johnson would like to consider the incident closed, as to who is going to ride in military aircraft, and he doesn't want to furnish a list of names to anyone. A decision has been reached as to who can ride and under what circumstances, and this will be rigidly adhered to."

Columnist: "Is the information we want available?"

Spokesman: "I should think so."

Columnist: "Is it classified information; that is, is it a military secret?"

Spokesman: "There couldn't be any military secret about it. . . . It is no more a military secret than a jack rabbit running across the street."

Columnist: "As I understand it, your office is supposed to furnish information to the public. Are you also supposed to censor information?"

No Censorship

Spokesman: "We are not set up to censor information. The only censorship is that which involves military security."

Columnist: "Does a trip to a musical show at Bohemian Grove involve military security?"

Spokesman: "No."

Columnist: "In that case, if the information is available, if it is not a military secret, and if you are not supposed to censor anything except military secrets, why can't you tell the public what it's entitled to know?"

Spokesman: (Fumbling for words): "There you get into a very personal thing. In Government you should get an honest answer while it will not embarrass . . ." (His voice trailed off).

Too Embarrassing

Columnist: "That is an important point. The question is whether Government officials, who are paid by the taxpayers, should be allowed to suppress information—just because it may be embarrassing to them."

Spokesman: "I didn't say this would be embarrassing to them. But it might embarrass other people."

Columnist: "Now, let's not be naive. Whoever was invited to ride in an Air Force plane might be embarrassed if his name were published, but his embarrassment wouldn't be as great as the official who invited him—Secretary of Defense Johnson, in this case."

Columnist (continuing): "Does the Defense Department consider that the taxpayers are entitled to know how their money is spent—as long as military security is not involved?"

The spokesman refused to answer.

When an attempt was made to query Johnson personally, it was found he had flown to Clarksburg, W. Va., in a special Government plane to play golf. Steve Early, also queried, was out of town.
